TOWN COUNCIL.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor T. W. Simpson in the chair.

Present—Reeve Ruttan and Councillors Kimmerly, Burrows, Steacy, Bogart and Gibbard

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from W. H. Garrison, applying for the position of Assessor. He was prepared to do the work for the sum of $175. Referred to Finance Committee.

A communication was read from Reeve Ruttan stating that the appointment of Mr. John Lowry, as Street Superintendent, by resolution of council was not binding, and that a by-law would have to be passed confirming it.

Mayor Simpson informed the council that he had been in consultation with the town solicitor in reference to this matter and the necessary by law would be introduced at the proper time. Reeve Ruttan's letter was ordered filed.

A communication was read from E. Thompson saying he had been requested to remove his horses from the fire hall. The modest sum of $1.00 per week and feed-stabbing was being paid him for the use of his horses for night fire services. At the present time he had no barn and, as he did not care to build one at this time of the year, if allowed to leave his team in the fire hall they might still be used for fire purposes without any charge to the town. Referred to the Fire Water and Light Committee with power to act.

The Streets Committee reported recommending the filing of the application of Jas. Vine for street overseer. Report adopted.

Coun. Burrows also reported that he had in his possession a list of those in arrears for amount due cement pavements. The list of those in arrears was not made public but roughly speaking for the year 1906 there are seven parties owing about $85 00; for the year 1907, three parties owing $46 20; for the year 1908, thirty parties owing $319 50, and for the year 1909, there is an amount of $201 61 which will be collectable this fall.

Moved by Reeve Ruttan, seconded by Coun. Gibbard, that the clerk notify all parties in arrears for gravelithic walk, and that they be asked to pay their arrears this month to the town treasurer, otherwise the accounts will be placed with the town solicitor for collection. Carried.

Moved by Reeve Ruttan, seconded by Coun. Gibbard, that the Electric Light Commissioners be asked to make a report, as required by the statute, to this council at its next session. Carried.

Coun. Steacy, chairman of the Poor and Sanitary Committee, reported that in accordance with the instructions of the council he had spoken to the several indigent parties in the town concerning their removal to the charitable institutions in Kingston, and all objected to being removed, with but one exception.

A by-law for the appointment of a Superintendent of Streets was introduced and given its first reading.

The council went into committee of the whole on the second reading.

On motion of Reeve Ruttan and Coun. Gibbard, the committee rose and reported progress and begged leave to sit again.

Moved by Reeve Ruttan, seconded by Coun. Gibbard, that the Streets Committee be empowered to secure a suitable person for the position of Street Superintendent, enter into a contract, and have the said contract embodied into a by-law and present it at the next regular meeting of council. Carried.

A by-law was introduced and passed appointing Jas. J. Graham, Sanitary Inspector.

Moved by Coun. Gibbard, seconded by Coun. Burrows, that the Street Committee be authorized to employ an engineer to advise what kind of a bridge would be advisable to build, to replace the old covered bridge and that Reeve Ruttan and the

OBITUARY.

LEO DRUMMEY.

We regret to be called on this week to announce the death of Leo Drumme, third son of John Drumme, Marysville. Leo was a most estimable young man and one who had endeared himself to all who had the privilege of knowing him. In fact to know him was to esteem and love him. He had all his life been a faithful and consistent member of St. Mary's congregation. He went out West where he contracted a cold and seeing he was failing in health he returned to his home in Marysville shortly before Xmas where all was done in their power to save him, but God thought it best to call him to himself at 2 a.m. on Wednesday. The announcement of his sudden death cast a gloom over the entire community. His funeral took place on Thursday at 9 a.m. to St. Mary's church, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Meagher, after which his remains were placed in the vault. The pall bearers were P. Doyle, B. McGuinness, T. McCambridge, M. Fahey, E. McFarlane and J. Ryan. He has left to mourn his loss besides his father, two sisters, Mrs. T. Curry and Miss Lillie, and four brothers, John, of Ottawa, Dan, of British Columbia, James and Eddy at home. The family have the sincere sympathy of the whole community in their sad affliction. The sad and sudden ending of a young and promising life reminds us once more that "In the midst of life we are in death" from earthly toil he has been laid in his long last sleep and friends and relatives lament his early death. Their loss however has been his eternal gain. In concluding this brief notice of him whom we all mourn we may fervently pray in the words of the ritual, May he rest in peace.

Though here on earth we shall not meet, Again to hold communion sweet; Oh may we meet on that blest shore Where farewell words are heard no more.

CENTREVILLE.

A few from here attended the Hanley Sale at Read, on Thursday last.

A large number of patrons attended the cheese meeting held in the Town Hall on Jan. 25th. After a discussion of the business of the past season Mr. F. C. Gerow, the present proprietor and manufacturer, was voted 1 15-16c per lb. and $40.00 to manufacture the product of the coming season, he to pay all expenses, which was accepted. All the old officers were re-elected.

The party given in the Hall here on Friday evening by the young ladies and bachelors of this district, was a decided success.

The Tamworth Glee Club will give an entertainment in the Town Hall here on Friday evening next under the auspices of the L. O. L. of this place.

A number of the Orangemen attended the County District meeting at Tamworth on Tuesday of this week. Perry Bros. are hauling an immense lot of ice to the village. It looks as though the world will be kept cool next for the position of Street Superintendent, enter into a contract, and have the said contract embodied into a by-law and present it at the next regular meeting of council. Carried.

A by-law was introduced and passed appointing Jas. J. Graham, Sanitary Inspector.

Moved by Coun. Gibbard, seconded by Coun. Burrows, that the Street Committee be authorized to employ an engineer to advise what kind of a bridge would be advisable to build, to replace the old curved bridge, and that Reeve Ruttan and the mover of the motion be added to the Committee. Carried.

Councillor Burrows asked whether there was a by-law governing dramatic presentations. The reason for asking the question was that it had been brought to his attention that at one of the moving picture theatres a complete robbery and murder scene had been enacted when a goodly number of children had been in attendance. These kind of entertainments, he thought, were not just the proper things to be presented before children.

The matter was left in the hands of Mayor Simpson and Chief Graham to consult with the proprietors of the moving picture shows.

Moved by Coun. Gibbard, seconded by Reeve Ruttan that by Law No. 78 be referred to the Printing and By Law Committee for revision. Carried.

This by-law governs the placing of merchandise on the walks, and also the hanging of signs over the streets, etc.

Moved by Reeve Ruttan, seconded by Coun. Gibbard, that all indigent persons, who have been a weekly charge upon this municipality during the year 1903, and who refuse to go to the Kingston charitable institution, have their supplies from the Poor and Sanitary Committee cut off entirely. Carried.

The following accounts were ordered paid: G. T. R., rental for weigh station, six months, $2 50; W. F. Hall, insurance on Public Library, $7 00; G. ### NEWS NOTES.

Philip Vansickle, aged eighty years, his son Martin, daughter Melitta and son-in-law, Harry Vansickle, lost their lives in a fire that destroyed the family homestead near Lyndon Saturday last.

A number of Ohio towns that depended on natural gas for fuel are without fire owing to the breaking of a gas main. The main across the Ohio river is broken, and the thermometer registers ten degrees below zero.

About 600 fine specimens of poultry are on exhibition at the annual show of the Cornwall Poultry Association, which opened Tuesday in the music hall. The exhibitors come from Montreal, Brockville, Kingston, Sherbrooke, and various other centres in Ontario.

Sunday night last Montreal was shaken by an earthquake. People in all parts of the city were awakened by the shock, which was so sharp that it was believed to have been an explosion. Men were sent out from the police stations to investigate. While the shock gave a scare to the inhabitants, no damage was reported.

At Wallace's Drug Store you can get 2 bottles of Thomas' Electric oil 25c, Chase's K and L pills 15c, Dodd's Kidney pills 35c, Dr. William's pink pills 30c, Pomeroys' Belladonna plasters 25c, Nerviline 18c, Stop-a-cough 15c. Everything fresh and good at Wallace's Drug Store.

Reginald Lewis, aged 23, and Percy Parr, aged 27, the latter belonging to the army service corps, arrested at Kingston, have confessed to Saturday night's burglary at Gana-quee, but they do not having been responsible for causing the subsequent big fire. In addition, they admit having committed the recent burglaries in Kingston, the total amounting to thousands of dollars. Much of it has been recovered. They will be sentenced Friday. The police here found that the men had hid a rig and some bandit gear in a basement.

In the afternoon, Mr. Goldsborough, being charged with the recent break-ins, was released on bail of $1,000.

LADIES' MUSICAL CLUB.

Third Annual Concert an Unqualified Success.

Great indeed is the credit due to the Ladies Musical Club of Napanee. Any one not acquainted with their splendid enthusiasm and thoroughly justified optimism would be tempted to charge them with presumption, so seemingly regardless are they of failure in their determination to give their patrons and, incidentally themselves, real high class music on the occasion of their annual concert. In fact the good patronage is quite a misnomer. It is a genuine privilege to attend this perfectly organized and highly cultivated performance.

Last year's concert is still recalled with the keenest appreciation, and now we have to acknowledge further indebtedness for the rich treat given to us on Tuesday last. We may safely state that it would be difficult to find a town in Canada of similar pretensions to Napanee, which could command enterprise sufficient to produce music of such exalted order as was so eagerly listened to and so greatly appreciated on this occasion.

The present is but the third season of the club, which has every reason to be proud of its achievements. It certainly commands the gratitude of all in its effort to place fully good music within the hearing of many who would have little opportunity of hearing the same.

The opera house was filled with an audience representing all that is best in Napanee and district, and the frequent encores bore striking testimony to the skill of the artists and the thorough appreciation of the listeners.

The programme was calculated to please the most exacting, and arranged as it was, in most judicious manner, it formed a continual and delightful change from beginning to end. It is worthy of record that copies of the program, a most tasteful production, were donated by Mrs. W. R. Travers, of Toronto, a former interested member.

To come down to the performers, we have nothing but unstinted praise to bestow. Miss Madeline Carter, soprano captivated everyone with a sweet highly trained voice. Her solos were carefully chosen and rendered in most artistic style. Special commendation is due to her dainty rendering of the four Geisha songs (Dahlousie Young) whilst the Boeceuse d Jocelyn (Angels guard thee) with violin and 'Cello obligato, was an example of vocalization and a fitting climax to the programme. An encore number "Young Night Thought" (Sidney Homer) was particularly sweet.

Very acceptable, indeed, were the members presented by Miss Enid Newcombe (Cello). Rarely do we hear the beauties of this great instrument so clearly demonstrated. The Tarantelle (Popper) was a genuine object lesson. True fingering, sweetness of tone, and pure musical instinct were each and all abundantly evident, and a well deserved encore resulted in a lovely rendering of Mascagni's immortal intermezzo (Cavalleria) which though very familiar, is always welcome.

Mr. F. C. Goldsborough (solo violin) has ever reason to be proud of his reception, which he certainly merited. The D. major Polondise (Wieniawsky) a florid, yet very beautiful composition, suffered nothing at the hands of Mr. Goldsborough, being played with

The Kingston city solicitor has advised the council to pay a share of the subway at Minto Road level crossing of the G. T. R., the scene of the recent fatality. It is reported that the company is to retract at this point to overcome the grade, and the city will negotiate with the company. The order of the railway committee several years ago was that the subway should be built, the company, city and county paying an equal share. The commission will be asked to let the order stand over until the policy of the company is known, as if the track be re-directed no subway will be needed. In the meantime the commission are asked to protect the crossing with gates or with a man.

Judge E. B. Fralick of Belleville was at Madoc on Jan. 28, when the license inspector at Madoc obtained the conviction of two hotelkeepers, Wm. Goulding and John Quinn of Marmora, for selling liquor to minors. R. R. Casement, J. P. imposed a fine of $20 each upon the offenders. Judge Fralick's court sat the same day, but only for an hour, and the judge adjourned to the hotel afterwards. Inspector Ayerst reports to the provincial secretary's department and Hon. W. J. Hanna cites the facts as illustrating the difficulty in carrying out the law, that when the inspector went to the St. Lawrence Hall at dinner time, Judge Fralick was indulging in very loud conversation. At 9 o'clock the judge began to talk about the cases. He reminded the inspector that the cases, if appealed, would come before him as county judge, and if this were the case he would soon upset the convictions. The notices of appeal being now issued, the inspector reports the matter over to make certain that Judge Fralick, who has already expressed an opinion on the cases, should not be permitted to adjudge them. The department will lay the matter before the minister of justice, so as to prevent the appeals going before Judge Fralick.

The Colonist, Victoria, B. C., publishes a statement as to the alteration in Mr. Borden's telegram regarding Asiatic immigration. The explanation is as follows: "We find on investigation that Mr. Borden's telegram of the 24th of October was taken from the telegraph editor's desk shortly after it was received, and was never returned to the Coldest office. It was nearly midnight when the telegram was received, and about that time a transcription of the report from the news mentioned was taken to the photo-engraving plant for the purpose of reproducing. We cannot excuse ourselves for being remiss in allowing the telegram to be published in this manner. We should have satisfied ourselves of its bona fides by going to the C. P. R. telegraph office, in the absence of the original, and securing a certified copy. We should then have discovered the regular alteration and put it right at once. We must, however, assume the responsibility of inexcusable neglect, and endeavor by exerting the greatest care in the future, to protect our paper and its friends."

BOYLE & SON.

True fingering, sweetness of tone, and pure musical instinct were each and all abundantly evident, and a well deserved encore resulted in a lovely rendering of Mascagni's immortal intermezzo (Cavallier) which though very familiar, is always welcome.

Mr. F. C. Goldsborough (solo violin) has every reason to be proud of his reception, which he certainly merited. The D. major Polonaise (Wieniawsky) a florid, yet very beautiful composition, suffered nothing at the hands of Mr. Goldsborough, being played with great power and intelligence. Particularly appealing were the clever Pizzicato Harmonics, played as they were with the utmost precision. The inevitable encore followed, and this, together with choice compositions by Bohm and Bazzini, proved Mr. Goldsborough to be a real master of technique, and a violinist of whom more will be heard in the future.

Of Mrs. Gerhard Barton one is tempted to say much. Her duties were arduous to a degree. After opening the programme with a delightful rendering of waltzes, op. 39 (Brahms), she continued to play accompaniments for the other artists in highly finished style, proving herself possessed of versatility for every style of work, both execution and expression leaving nothing to be desired. Particularly impressive was her playing of the Lento (Chamade) along with violin and cello, and the gratifying reception she received was richly deserved.

The Gerhard Heintzman Co., of Toronto, sent down a fine concert grand piano specially for the occasion. The concert was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and reflects the highest credit on the management and all concerned.

The Finest Sight on Earth Is Held to Be a Good Fight.

And Benaijah, the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, who had done mighty deeds, went down and slew a lion in the midst of a pit in time of snow. II Samuel xxii, 20.

He was a valiant man, and the son of a valiant man and the grandson of a man who had done mighty deeds. The valiant man loves such a fight. This is the attraction of the most violent forms of athletics. It is the element of conflict which constitutes so much of the attractiveness of mountaineering. I never saw anyone climb the face of a mountain which he did not want to scale, and I understand perfectly how it was that after some account on the limited opportunities for climbing in England, a sporting paper announced that there were three or four places in the lake country where a man could comfortably break his neck. I was not in the least surprised to be told that the hotels in those places made a fortune within the next twelve months.

It is the finest sight on earth—the very finest sight on earth—a good fight. Only, mind you, it must be a good fight!

But I bid you fight! You are a valiant man and the son of a valiant man and you are too good a man to go down to destruction before a giant vice. There is that in you which is worth too much to man and God for failure now. I believe in you and good men will believe in you and God believes in you.

A big city is not an easy place for a man who has lions to kill. Its temptations are many. Its cosmopolitanism creates a certain atmosphere—an atmosphere always non-religious, often positively irreligious. It loves pleasure only too well. And—

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
FEB. 7.

Lesson VI. True and False Brotherhood. Golden Text,
Prov. 12.22.

Verse 32. The multitude of them that believed — Now numbering many thousands in the city of Jerusalem and its immediate vicinity.

Of one heart—Having a common purpose in life, and interested alike each in the other's welfare.

Had all things common—A real, though entirely voluntary, community of goods.

35. Distribution was made — The administration of the one common fund was left to the apostles, and was no inconsiderable burden added to their many other responsibilities of leadership in so large a community of believers.

36. And Joseph—Having made a general statement concerning the disposition of lands and houses by those who believed, Luke proceeds to point out certain notable individuals who did not exempt themselves from the general rule.

Barnabas—The same who later became the companion of Saint Paul on the latter's first missionary journey. He was a native of the island of Cyprus and a member of the tribe of Levi.

37. Laid it at the apostles' feet—Turned the money over to them to be used for the best interests of the whole Christian community.

5. 1. But a certain man — The following incident is cited by way of contrast with the general spirit which prevailed among the Jerusalem believers, and for the sake of pointing out, as the author does in the last verse of our lesson, the influence of the sad incident on the entire Christian community.

Ananias, with Sapphira—Mentioned only here in the New Testament narrative.

2. Kept back part of the price—The word "part," is left to be supplied in the original. The context implies that the action of Ananias in thus withholding part of the money realized from the sale of his possession was secret and covered up by an attempt at deception, his wife also being a party to the action.

3. But Peter said—The discerning apostle was quick to discover the hypocrisy of this man.

To lie to—Or, "to deceive."

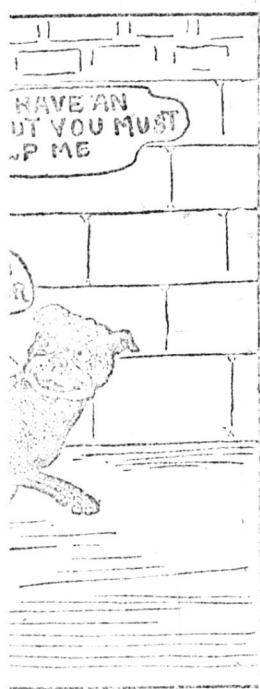

The Holy Spirit—The manifest presence of the Divine Spirit in the fellowship of the Christian believers made the crime of Ananias exceptionally grievous.

4. After it was sold, was it not in thy power?—Peter's question makes it clear that the surrender of private possessions for the common good was entirely voluntary on the part of each individual, no form of compulsion being resorted to.

Conceived this thing in thy heart—Deliberately thought out the plan to deceive. It was not, therefore, a crime committed under the stress of a sudden impulse, but one pre-meditated in its every detail.

Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God—This earnest arraignment of the guilty man implies that the attempt to deceive God was, in this case as always, an utter failure. Men may deceive their fellow-men; they cannot hide the

SCUTH AFRICAN NIGHT.

A Stopping Place on the Cape to Cairo Railway.

The dark comes down with African swiftness, and at 8 o'clock the train stops for the night at Choma, says a writer in the London Daily Mail. Instantly all is life and bustle. In an incredibly short time all the natives on the train—and they often number a hundred, either going to or returning from the mines—are busy making fires by the side of the track upon which to cook their evening meal. Our own boy is busy with the rest, making a fire also and boiling water for tea.

In fifteen minutes you have the new experience of a dark African night, with its brilliant southern stars and the blazing fires, each within its circle of laughing, chattering natives, whose white teeth gleam in the firelight as they throw their heads back in huge enjoyment of any joke. They are almost uncanny, those gleaming white teeth! Everywhere just firelight and black, indistinguishable figures and rows of gleaming teeth!

The second evening we stop at 6 o'clock, while it is still daylight, and so we get a longer stroll. We have now made friends with the one or two other travellers, and a little friendly gossip passes the time until a meal is ready. It is so interesting to know why these other travellers are there, each in his way so different from the traveller at home, who excites neither interest nor surprise.

Here is a Belgian going to the Congo, manager, of course, of some big rubber plantation or mine, whose wife is brave enough to accompany her husband into the Buck of Beyoed. Here is a native commissioner for Northeastern Rhodesia taking his wife and child to some distant outpost only to be reached after perhaps ten or twenty days trek. One looks at the woman with a sense of awe. She is young, pretty and charming, and out there where she is going there is no other woman, no doctor with perhaps eighty miles, no other child for her child to play with—nothing but days and weeks of monotony and the silence one can hear. We look at her with awe because we know she is a heroine. We know she is going in a measure to a silent martyrdom, unless the man for whom she goes can be all things to her.

Later on the station master regales us all with an excellent photograph, and the rows of glistening teeth glisten more persistently than ever as the natives gather around both awed and delighted.

Then once more we all retire to sleep and next morning awake refreshed to the contemplation of the loveliest part of the whole route, the hilly district between Kafue and Lasakas. Kafue we had passed the previous afternoon and gazed in surprise at the fine bridge across the river, the longest bridge in Africa.

All through the last day the scenery is again chiefly forest, and at one place the spot is pointed out where the engineer recently alighted from his caboose and shot two lions while the train waited. He explains himself how there were three or four playing together quite near the line, like huge dogs, and how, being at the back of the train, he got in the first shot and killed a crime committed under the stress of a sudden impulse, but one pre-meditated in its every detail.

Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God—This earnest arraignment of the guilty man implies that the attempt to deceive God was, in this case as always, an utter failure. Men may deceive their fellow-men; they cannot hide the truth from God.

5. Ananias hearing these words, fell down—The words of Peter were both an arraignment and a condemnation, implying impending judgment, the fulfillment of which was not long delayed.

Gave up the ghost—The word for "expired" here used is a technical medical term of rare use, and as such one of the many little indications found in the book of Acts supporting the inference that the author of the book was a physician.

6. Young—Or, younger. The emphasis on the age of those who carried the body of Ananias to its burial indicates a distinction observed in the early Christian Church in the division of responsibilities and forms of service, by which positions of trust and responsibility fell upon the older men, while the younger men were called upon to fill positions requiring active manual service of a less responsible character.

Buried him—Immediately, or at least upon the same day, according to the usual necessary custom, in a semitropical climate.

7. Three hours after—After the burial referred to in the preceding verse.

8. Answered unto her—Responding to her look of inquiry with his direct question, intended no doubt to give Sapphira an opportunity to confess her participation in her husband's conspiracy, and thus escape the fate which had befallen him.

Yea, for so much—For so deliberate and overt a falsehood under the circumstances there was no excuse.

9. How is it that ye have agreed together!—Peter again emphasizes the fact that the guilt of both husband and wife lay primarily in the premeditated character of the crime which they had committed.

11. Great fear came upon the whole church—The effect of the sad incident upon the community both explains Luke's purpose in including the incident in his narrative, and at the same time suggests a reason and a justification for the severity of the punishment meted out to the offenders. In the light of what had transpired others who might possibly have been tempted to like duplicity were restrained from yielding to the temptation.

RE-TRIAL ORDERED.

A soldier was recently tried by a court-martial for stealing money, the property of the canteen.

The case was fairly gone into, and eventually the court found him not guilty, and told him that he left the court without a stain on his character.

After a little while a sergeant came in and said to the president: "Please, sir, Private Murphy (the late prisoner) would like to speak to you."

Private Murphy was marched in, and saluting the Bench, he said:

"Beg pardon, sir; I wish to thank you for your kindness, and to ask you what I ought to do with the money?"

A lazy man is on the wrong side of humanity's profit and loss account.

REMARKABLE STORIES COME TO LIGHT.

DAILY TRAGEDIES OF THE MODERN INFERNO — GHOULS WAGE OPEN WARFARE.

It is doubtful if the full horrible story of the earthquake will ever be told. The survivors have only a confused idea of what took place. They were awakened by the falling of their houses and how they escaped they cannot guess. The awful minutes, in most cases when they were struggling for life, are a nightmare or a blank which perhaps even time will not clear, writes a Naples correspondent.

However, some few have been able to put their sensations and experiences into words. I have heard of a man who inhabited the fourth floor of an apartment-house and who was awakened by what he took to be an explosion. When he gained his senses he found himself in an alarming position. The floor, probably through some defect in building, had given way cleanly as though cut by a knife, right under his large double bed, which thus had two legs hanging in the void, the other two being on the portion of the floor left. The bed was dangerously inclined, and from it had rolled his wife into the gulf, he saving himself from a like fate by throwing himself violently onto the floor on the other side. He was rescued by the firemen after staying in his dangerous position for 48 hours, without food and listening to the moans and cries of his little daughter who had

SHARED HER MOTHER'S FATE.

She was afterward taken out of the debris, with scarcely a whole bone in her body, dead.

A poor woman who was found in the streets of Messina attracted attention through her strange behavior. At first, it was thought that her terrible experiences had turned her brain, but it was afterward discovered that she was perfectly sane. It seems that she had lost six children, five of whom slept in a room together, while she and a baby occupied a small room nearby. They were all buried among the debris of the house, the bigger children probably killed in the fall, as she heard no sound. The baby fell with her under a beam, but on her chest and would have been alive now had not one of the ghouls who added fresh terrors to the city, angry at not finding anything to steal and irritated by the crying of the child which attracted attention to the spot, brutally kicked it, killing it immediately. The mother was afterward released and finding a friend on the street, poured out her terrible trouble. The friend had evidently been the goody of her district and told the poor credulous creature, that if she said two beads of her rosary at every street corner, never repeating a street and crossed herself five times, her children, if not yet dead, would revive. So the poor thing had pursued her pitiable perambulations for 24 hours, without food, never stopping for fear of thus indirectly killing her poor children, long since dead. She absolutely refused even to sit down until assured by the archbishop of Messina, before whom she was taken, that

LONDON'S DEATH RATE

THE YEAR 1907 HAS THE LOWEST RECORD.

GAIN OF 905,505 YEARS OF "LIFE-CAPITAL" IN 1907 IN WORLD'S BIGGEST CITY.

There was a gain to London of 905,505 years of life-capital during the year 1907. This is the year covered by the latest report, issued recently, of the L. C. C.'s Medical Officer, Sir Shirley Murphy. It was the year of London's lowest death rate. The figures fell to 14.6 per 1,000, which was lower than that of any other big city in the kingdom or in any other part of the world.

What this remarkable drop in the death rate means to London is expressed by the medical officer in terms of what he calls "life capital." Comparing the average death rate during the decennium 1891-1900, the doctor represented during the year a saving of 22,146 lives, representing a gain to the community of 905,505 years of life capital.

NOT ACCIDENTAL.

It is well to know that the low death rate of 1907 is not an accidental one. It is one of three successive rates that have broken all previous records. In 1905 the figure was 15—lower than it had ever been before. It remained the same in the year following. Then came the fall to 14.6 in 1907, which encourages the hope that when the next rate is recorded London will have again improved upon itself. If we consider the gain in life capital during these three years, 1905-7, as compared with the decennium, 1891-1900, we find it is represented by over two million years of life.

A comparison between London's death rate with that of other big cities at home and abroad works out thus:

London .....	14.6
Leeds .....	15.3
Birmingham .....	16.2
Sheffield .....	17.1
Manchester .....	18.1
Liverpool .....	19.0
Berlin .....	15.4
Rome .....	18.2
Paris .....	18.5
New York .....	18.5
Vienna .....	17.3
St. Petersburg .....	24.7

BY SEPARATE BOROUGHS.

Taking London by separate boroughs, the half-dozen with the lowest death rates compare thus with the half-dozen with the highest:

Hampstead .....	9.0
Stoke Newington .....	11.5
Lewisham .....	11.5
Wandsworth .....	12.3
Woolwich .....	12.5
Greenwich .....	12.7
Shoreditch .....	20.5
Finsbury .....	18.7
Bermondsey .....	18.3
Southwark .....	18.9
Beth. Green .....	17.5
Holborn .....	17.4

According to the tables which the medical officer has prepared, the "expectation of life" at birth in Shoreditch is nearly 16 years less than in Hampstead. One of the explanations is that nearly 30 per cent. of the people in Shoreditch live under conditions of overcrowding.

DEATH TO VIVISECTORS.

The leading surgeons and physiologists of Great Britain are receiving a printed circular containing an extraordinary threat to kill by prayer those who practise vivisection.

The sender, who is said to be an Irish anti-vivisectionist named Cowan, is the person addressed, and how, knowing the efficacy of prayer, she has resolved to use it to remove vivisectionists she intended first to kill Dr. Starling, professor of physiology at the University College Hospital of London, but, she says:

"It seemed unfair to give such a stab in the dark without letting him know."

There is no shadow of suspicion the Ministry to receive, if in accordance with this will, the man most likely to cause future suffering to innocents by experiments. About a week ago, after one of the best known vivisectors died,

This is taken to show the Almighty's judgment, and the Christian witness. We are therefore to be warned, and advised to keep their faith in their own hands.

GOLDFISH FEEDS KITTEN.

"Dick" Swims to Surface of Aquarium With Cat's Breakfast.

Hiram Blackmar, a citizen of Winsted, Conn., has a large aquarium in which until recently were a score of goldfish. About two weeks ago, all of the fish except one sickened and died. The sole survivor of the piscatorial pets is a very large Japanese goldfish, which Mr. Blackmar has owned for six years, and which has become so tame that it rises to the surface of the water when any of the family calls its name—"Dick."

About a week ago Mr. Blackmar noticed his pet kitten sitting on the edge of the aquarium, gazing steadily into the water. In a few minutes he was astonished to see "Dick," the goldfish, swim to the surface with a bit of milkweed in its mouth. The kitten reached down and with her tiny paw took the milkweed and ate it.

This performance was repeated a number of times, and now the kitten goes to the aquarium every morning for its breakfast.

HER SACRIFICE WAS IN VAIN.

Conditions in Reggio are worse than at Messina. It would take the vivid pen of a Dante to give an adequate idea of the conditions in the sister cities. At Reggio two thirds of the population lie under the debris of fallen buildings, the other third are in the streets, without roof, without food, without water, without clothes. Those fatal 30 seconds cast down all the conventional barriers set up by society and reduced rich and poor alike to primitive man who must have shelter from cold, and clothing and food for his body, and when he is deprived of them a sufficient time he will fight for them. To this must be added total darkness at night, only broken by the fiendish thieves who, having looted a shop, had become possessed of a bit of candle and with it made the round of the lugubrious rubbish, to see what they could steal from the bodies of the dead.

These jackals, composed of the scum of the town, are so bold that their researches are in many cases conducted in broad daylight and they resist with firearms and knives anyone who tries to interfere with them. the result being regular pitched battles in full sight in the principal streets, in which law and order do not always get the best of it. Thus several soldiers have lost their lives and several more will undoubtedly do so before long.

One particularly touching case of this kind has just occurred at Messina. A soldier who had, through his exceptional strength, succeeded in lifting a beam which had pinned him down, from over his legs, worked for almost two days in rescuing others with scarcely any rest. Late at night he was returning to a shed to sleep when he heard the sobbing cry of a little girl.

He stopped and a group of three men, with whom a girl of eight was struggling violently, came in view. He stopped them, whereupon the child fled with what was afterward proved to be a considerable sum of money which she had gathered together in her father's house. The thieves, furious at the escape of their victim, set upon the soldier and killed him by kicking him to death.

These are but a few of the daily tragedies of this modern inferno, the victim of water, fire and earthquake, and rendered a hell by man; one moment the most beautiful spot on earth, the next a sink of terror and iniquity.

as well as deaths, fell to the lowest point ever recorded in London. The birth-rate stood at 25.6, one lower than the previous year, and three less than it was in the first three years of the present century. Marriages also show a falling-off to the rate of 17.0 in 1907, from 17.1 in the previous year. The lowest marriage rate was reached in 1905, when the figure fell to 16.9. The marriage rate in London has decreased by 21 per cent. during the last 35 years.

About one person in every 2,000 of the population of London is homeless. On the night of February 8, 1907, an effort was made to ascertain the number of persons who, being without homes, passed the night in the streets or on the staircases of tenement houses, where the doors are left unfastened. The number was calculated at 2,400. This was an increase of two or three hundred on the number of the homeless discovered on a night in 1904, and on another night in 1905. On the night of the last inquiry 745 beds in the casual ward remained unoccupied.

* CURES BY USE OF RADIUM.

King's Physician Cites Some Remarkable Cases.

Sir Frederick Treves, sergeant surgeon to the King and consulting surgeon of the London Hospital, lecturing at that hospital recently, cited interesting instances of radium cures he had witnessed, including vascular tumors, birthmarks, moles, eczema, keloids, rodent ulcers and epitheliomata. He said it was almost uncanny to see the rapid manner in which sometimes radium accomplished healing. After the first application, say on Monday, nothing happens until about Friday, when the skin suddenly becomes red and irritable. Then a sort of crust forms, which comes away in two or three weeks. About a month later there was a second application of radium, after which in many cases the patient did not need to see a physician again.

Dr. Treves pointed out that one of the greatest uses of radium in the future might result from its curious radioactive emanations. He described how a penny enclosed in a jar with an unsealed phial of radium became itself radioactive, and if the penny were removed and washed with nitric acid its radioactivity was transferred to the latter, while the penny was no longer radioactive.

As another instance of possible usefulness, the lecturer told how a solution of such radioactive deposit was injected into a mouse suffering from an artificially induced abdominal cancer. The result was that the growth entirely disappeared. It would be a mistake to rely too much on this or similar cases, but they were very suggestive.

It was possible lung diseases some day might be found curable by radium.

POPULATION OF AUSTRALIA.

Only 75,000 Aborigines Now Left on Continent.

It is estimated that there are now left in the continent of Australia 75,000 of the original aboriginal population; in the colony of Queensland there are about 20,000. Queensland has an elaborate system for looking after the welfare of the blacks by means of "protectors" stationed all over the colony, to see that the natives are fed and clothed, and shielded from the interference of white people. Missionary reports received indicate that the young natives have made very good progress in both reading and writing, but teaching them arithmetic is hopeless. Many of the natives are well over six feet, and one, lately deceased, a native of the Nassau district, stood seven feet two inches, and was built in proportion. Like most savages, they are polygamists, but they are not cannibals. The natives under civilization have developed habits of economy and saving. The 186 aboriginal girls in domestic service in Queensland have over $55,000 to their credit in the Government Savings Bank, and considerable deposits are made by the men engaged in work throughout the colony. One of the best things the Government of the colony has done for them is to prohibit the sale of opium and opium ashes, and all intoxicating liquors, to them, under severe penalties.

It appears that both in Moscow and St. Petersburg it is unlawful to give kisses in public, a kiss in the street being penalized by a fine of seven roubles, ten roubles being the fine inflicted on those who practise osculation in railway trains or in tramcars.

A recent enactment even renders persons who send declarations of love on postcards liable to a fine of five roubles. A rouble in English money represents about two shillings and ten pence.

ISLE WORKING DAY BROKEN UP FARM LANDS AND STOCK PREVENT TUBERCULOSIS FROM BONNIE SCOTLAND

IRE TOO MANY MEALS IN BUSINESS HOURS IN GERMANY.

Isle of Two Hours Allowed for Hot Dinner — Meals of Different Establishments.

Complaints are common in Berlin, Germany, that the hours of work are not better arranged and more generally observed. Berlin, it is declared, has no business day like other capitals, and consequently no one can fix any rendezvous where a considerable number of people are to be brought together.

The cause of the trouble is the long hours and the frequent meals, large or small, which break the business day up. Business in Germany begins early, at 8 o'clock, even in the banks and other big offices, but if so there is always a "pause" of from a quarter to half of an hour at 11 or 12 or 1 for the enjoyment of a thick sandwich and glass of beer or milk. Then comes a "table time" at 2 or 3 o'clock, which usually lasts for two full hours, during which thousands of employees go home by street car and get through a satisfying hot meal.

NOT CONDUCIVE TO WORK.

The result in the majority of cases is that this indulgence is followed by a drowsiness that is anything but good either for the employee or his work, even though work is continued until 7 or 8 o'clock. In addition to the "table time" many employees also snatch a hasty bite or cup of coffee about half-past 5.

If every business concern were exactly to observe the same "pause" and "table times" it would not be so bad, but as a matter of fact Berlin has not reached this stage of unanimity and each place of business arranges them to suit its own convenience or caprice. Hence the difficulty of getting business men together for any common object or even for an appointment between two men.

REMEDY PROPOSED.

The remedy proposed is that Berlin should follow the example of London, where work is not crowded into such narrow limits. Berlin would then have its business day and be done with the whole thing at, say, 5 o'clock. In that case, it is moreover urged with some force, Berlin could do without its so-called night life, which means that in the centre of the city saloons and cafes and restaurants are allowed to remain open the night through.

Certain well known saloons and cafes have not interrupted business for several years, for when night work ends day work begins.

Berlin's night life is chiefly meant for provincials, for whom it seems to have a powerful attraction, but is also largely due to the needs of employees turned loose from business too late to go home for a comfortable meal or for the enjoyment of sports or other recreation.

STATEMENT OF VALUES IN DIFFERENT PROVINCES.

Latest Report of the Bureau of Statistics and Census of the Dominion.

The Bureau of Census and Statistics issued recently a report for the year just ended on farm land values in the Dominion, the value of farm animals, and the average of farm and domestic wages. The average value of farm land for all the Provinces is $35.70 per acre. In five of the Provinces it is under $30, being $27.30 in Manitoba, $25 in Nova Scotia, $21.40 in New Brunswick, $20.40 in Saskatchewan, and $18.20 in Alberta. In Prince Edward Island the average is $33.70 per acre, in Quebec $41.90, in Ontario $47.30, and in British Columbia $76.10. Values are higher in the last named Province, owing to the comparatively large extent of farm land there in orchard and small fruits.

VALUE OF HORSES.

The average value of horses at the end of the year is $46 for those under one year, $100 for one to under three years, and $143 for three years and over. Horses of the last class are below an average of $120 in Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Alberta; in New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario they are about $140, and in Manitoba and Saskatchewan they are $170 to $176.

Milch cows have an average value in the Dominion of $34, ranging from $29 in Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick to $36 in Ontario and $37 in Saskatchewan, but in British Columbia the average is $49. Other horned cattle have an average value over the Dominion of $9 for those under one year, $21 for one to under three years, and $32 for three years and over. These averages are generally close for all the Provinces, but the highest values are given for Ontario and the western Provinces.

SWINE AND SHEEP.

The average value of swine is given at $5.86 per 100 pounds live weight, being lowest in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and highest in Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia.

Sheep are given an average value of $5.23 per head for the Dominion, and are below the average in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Saskatchewan.

The total value of farm animals, computed on the foregoing averages and the number of animals on the farms in June, was $530,000,000. The June price of wool for the Dominion was 18 cents per pound.

The average wages of farm and domestic help for the Dominion per month was $24.60 for males and $13.50 for females, and per year $209 for males and $130 for females. The highest averages are reported for the western Provinces, where they reach about $300 per year for males and $160 for females. In Ontario and Quebec the average for males is about $240 and for females $120 per year.

DISCOVERY BY DR. RANDLE C. ROSENBERGER.

Philadelphian Finds Germs Invade Blood Before Affecting the Lungs.

By official announcement the greatest discovery in the war against consumption, since the finding of the tuberculosis bacillus by Koch, has been made public.

This is the discovery by Dr. Randle C. Rosenberger, famous biologist and holder of the chair of bacteriology at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, that the tuberculosis germ can now be found in the blood, before it reaches the lungs, that it is then in a condition which makes it readily amenable to destruction by simple treatment and fresh air, and that it will soon be possible to use a perfect anti-toxin which will stamp the disease out entirely.

By Dr. Rosenberger's discovery, consumption, from being the greatest scourge of modern times, may yield to the most simple treatment.

TESTED 150 CASES.

Dr. Rosenberger has tested his discovery and his method upon 150 cases, in none of which was there a failure. He has made known the results of his experiments to the College of Physicians and to the faculty of Jefferson College, and his whole paper upon the subject will appear shortly in a medical publication. Before that Dr. Rosenberger, who is a purist in medical ethics, will not discuss or go into details of the matter.

From other sources, entirely familiar with Dr. Rosenberger's experiments and his diagnosis, it was learned that the bacteriologist had found that the tuberculosis bacilli make their first appearance in the blood of the infected person. They do not first appear in the lungs or glands, but invariably in the blood.

To varying degrees of time, depending upon the condition and susceptibility of the affected one they course about in the circulation before settling in the part that gives them least resistance. While in the blood they may be found by a simple test which Dr. Rosenberger has discovered.

ANTI-TOXIN CAN BE INJECTED

By this discovery an anti-toxin or virus can be injected that will render the human organism immune to consumption. Work upon this virus based on the new phase of the matter is now in progress. The hope of its perfection is not a distant one, it was cautiously said.

"If this is all that is hoped," said Dr. Lawrence Flick, president of the Phipps Institute for Consumptives, "the fight against the great white plague is won."

The discovery is not confined to learning the presence of the germs in the blood, but marks their most incipient appearance in the lungs and in all forms of tuberculosis, such as the rarer forms of Pott's disease of the spine and tuberculosiis of the hip.

The simplicity of the method is such that it will be available to every physician and to the simplest laboratory.

STARVED AMID PLENTY.

Two Old Ladies Found Dead With Hoarded Wealth.

Two eccentric old maiden ladies named Himess have been found starved to death in their humble dwelling near Chatham, England, while in their room were considerable sums of money and a savings bank book worth £220. They were both over seventy years of age, and shared a small cottage at the bottom of Miller's Court, Brook, a very poor neighborhood. Some alarm was caused by their not having been seen by neighbors for two or three days, and the matter was reported to the police. Inspector Jones and two constables on Friday night obtained an entrance to the house through the bedroom window, and both women were found dead.

The elder was in bed undressed, with very little bed clothing, and the younger was lying on the floor beneath the bed partly undressed.

At the inquest the names of the deceased were stated to be Sarah Ann and Nellie Himess. One of the sisters was eighty and the other well over seventy. A neighbor, Mrs. Harris, said she had known them fifteen years, and used to do laundry work and run errands for them. She was never allowed to enter their house. They were very eccentric, and since last November had grieved over the death of a nephew who lived with them. Police Inspector Jones spoke to searching the house. He found money in various parts. Ten pounds in gold was wrapped in a newspaper, £1 7s. in silver in a smoker's companion, £3 5s. in a jug, half a sovereign in another jug, 10d. on the kitchen table, 3½d. in a box, 3½d. on a mantelpiece, and packed away in a staircase cupboard, difficult to reach, and full of rubbish, a tin box containing 204 sovereigns. There was also a post-office savings bank book, showing £200 to the credit of the nephew who died. The rooms were in a shocking condition, and the women's bodies were emaciated. Dr. Bryan said that death was due to want of food, extreme cold, and general self-neglect, and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence.

IMMENSE CONCRETE PIERS

Those of Clover Bar Bridge May be Largest in the World.

The concrete piers of the Clover Bar Bridge, on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway are said to be the largest all concrete piers in Canada, and perhaps in the world, says the Edmonton Bulletin. There are four of them, two of which are 140 feet high and the others seven feet less in height. The bridge from abutment to abutment is 1,660 feet below the surface of the water.

The concrete work was undertaken in midwinter. This was one of the difficulties with which the constructing company had to contend. To work with concrete during cold weather it is necessary to use heat.

Houses were constructed around the piers and these were heated with steam, which was conveyed by pipes from a plant on the river bank. After placing and packing the concrete in its molds, it was also necessary that it should be kept heated at least a day, and then allowed to set gradually.

The highest averages are reported for the western Provinces, where they reach about $300 per year for males and $160 for females. In Ontario and Quebec the average for males is about $240 and for females $120 per year.

DOUBLE GAS BAG IN AIRSHIP.

Remarkable Flying Machine Invented by an Englishman.

W. Fries-Greene, a Brighton (England) photographer, has patented and is now building the most remarkable airship yet constructed.

The novel feature of the vessel is its "twin construction." It consists of two elongated gasbags, placed side by side. Should one lag collapse there will no fear of accident, and the airship has as its balancing instrument the wonderful gyroscope.

There are four motors, one driving the gyroscope, another the propeller fan and two others for emergency. The gyroscope is used for steering, its position being altered by means of steering gear attached to an ordinary ship's wheel.

The airship can be made to rise or fall by a movable weight, traveling on an endless band, from end to end of the machine. Two aeroplanes are also used to alter the angle of the airship.

The main petrol driving engine works a dynamo, which in turn drives electric motors as an extra precaution in case of a breakdown in the petrol engine.

In a light wind two basket cars can be hoisted up or down within 30 feet of the ground, to take up or land passengers, but in a heavy wind the airship will have to come to earth.

Mr. Fries-Greene is patenting the airship all over the world, and engineers who have seen it, have expressed surprise at the simplicity and practicability of the machine. The airship now being constructed at Southwick will carry one man only, but later on Mr. Greene will build one to carry 15 passengers.

"I swear to perform my duties with zeal and integrity, and to maintain secrecy as to our judicial deliberations."

Thus, with uplifted hands, spoke a neat, demure woman of 30 in the First Chamber of the Paris Civil Court recently. She was dressed in black, with a black fur toque on her head. Her name is Mlle. Jusselin.

She is believed to be the first woman to be invested with judicial authority, for she was recently elected at the triennial election of "Purd'hommes" to be one of the trade judges who sit to hear and decide upon disputes between employers and their work-people.

She is the first woman to be elected to this capacity under the new law authorizing women to be elected as "Purd'hommes," and will take her seat on the judge's bench at the first sitting of the court.

Her judicial insignia will consist of a large silk sash passed over the shoulders and meeting on the breast, in front of which hangs a large silver medal representing the figure of the French Republic. She is by trade a dressmaker.

CAN MAKE SMALL DIAMONDS.

Formula Submitted to the French Academy of Sciences.

At one of the approaching sessions of the French Academy of Sciences a communication will be read from a French chemist, referred to as M. H., containing a formula for the manufacture of artificial diamonds. The secret for the making of these stones has been committed to writing, and is now deposited in a small envelope which has been confined to the secretary of the academy.

It appears that the chemist's interesting discovery was accidental. The diamonds manufactured by him were submitted to minute examination by Professor Laクロix and M. Leon Maquenne, a member of the French Institute, and were declared to be in every respect identical with veritable diamonds. M. Maquenne burned twenty-one of H.'s diamonds in order to ascertain whether they were composed of pure carbon, and Professor Laクロix had a dozen more placed at his disposal.

The diamonds were diminutive, but the smallest was larger than any obtained by the late Henri Moissan in his electric furnace.

M. Maquenne is of opinion that the method employed by the new diamond maker, which is entirely different from that of M. Moissan, is a costly one, and doubts whether it could be made to pay. The chemist, however, has been furnished by a group of financiers with sufficient capital to continue his experiments.

TRICKED BY A WOMAN.

Most Learned Egyptologist Beceived in Alleged Relics.

A quiet-looking, unobtrusive little French woman has succeeded in deceiving one of the most learned Egyptologists in Europe, Commissioner Caparo, of the Royal Museums, Belgium, by selling him two scarabs with alleged Egyptian inscriptions, for some $2,000.

Inscriptions on the stones seemed to settle the much-debated question whether the ancient Egyptians had circumnavigated Africa. They related the voyages as a fact, and described an audience given by King Necho to the chief of the Phoenician sailors on their return from the journey.

There was great competition for the stones, which, according to his widow, were found among the belongings of the late M. Bouriant, director of the French School of History at Cairo, though the International Congress at Berlin last August declared that they were frauds.

The true history has just been disclosed by a Paris engraver, M. Baubien, who stated that he had engraved the stones from designs supplied by the late director's son. When they were submitted to him he recognized his work, though the stones had been artificially aged. Mme. Bouriant and her son have confessed the fraud, and are being prosecuted in Belgium.

RAT POISON FELL ON EGG

THROUGH THE RAFTERS ABOVE THE KITCHEN.

Story Told at Irish Murder Trial— Accused Woman Was Acquitted.

An extraordinary murder trial, in which the defence to a charge of husband poisoning was that the poison fell from the rafters of the roof, has taken place at the Ulster assizes. By acquitting the accused, the jury accepted the plea put forward on her behalf. The prisoner was Elizabeth Kirkwood Docherty, who was indicted for the murder of her husband near Dallymoney, county Antrim, last June.

NO HUMAN HAND.

The solicitor-general, prosecuting, said the deceased, who was a farmer, died of strichnine poison, administered to him at his supper, which was prepared by the prisoner. He would, counsel declared, satisfy the jury that no human hand was laid upon an egg which contained the poison from the moment it was broken in the pan until it was eaten except that of the accused. Death occurred the following morning.

A week later one of the prisoner's daughters, aged three years, also died from strichnine poison, which had been taken in milk. The husband's remains were exhumed after this second death and an analyst would give evidence that the stomachs of both deceased contained from half to a grain of strichnine. Accused had been in an asylum, but it was not contended she was insane at the time of the deaths.

FELL THROUGH FLOOR.

In concluding his statement the solicitor-general intimated that the defence would be that some strichnine placed on the floor of the loft immediately above the kitchen for the purpose of destroying rats had fallen through the rafters on to the egg as it was being removed from the fire to the table. The crown contended that this accident could not have occurred, but that the prisoner's hand had placed the poison in the egg. Evidence was then taken.

Counsel for the defence said his case was that the poison had fallen from the loft above the kitchen through the rafters and accidentally dropped on an egg, portions of which prisoner had also eaten. Her husband, before he died, had expressed this view, and as he had acquitted her he (counsel) was sure the jury would do likewise.

The jury found the accused not guilty and she was discharged.

Carlisle Anderson pushed his way through the crowd and picked up the dog. The little creature had been run over by a passing automobile, and a crowd had gathered, but no one had offered to help the animal in its suffering. Carlisle was very big, and the onlookers seemed to give way to him without argument. One man suggested that the dog might bite.

"Poor little brute!" mused Carlisle as he started to the corner drug store with the dog in his arms. A clerk telephoned for the animal ambulance, and Carlisle still patted the dog.

The frightened animal looked up at him and, failing to recognize the friendly face, snapped at him. Carlisle drew back quickly, but not until the dog had bitten his hand. A cry made him turn quickly.

"Did he bite you?" asked a tall girl who had been buying some drugs at the counter.

"Yes, a bit of a scratch," acknowledged Carlisle. "It doesn't amount to much." But at the same time he mopped the blood from the hand.

"Won't you come around the corner with me to father?" pleaded the girl. "You see, father's a doctor, and he will cauterize the wound for you."

Before he knew it Carlisle was walking beside the girl, and together they entered the handsome residence of Dr. Theodore Standing.

"This doesn't amount to anything, sir," assured Dr. Standing.

"Oh, I don't think the little beast has given me hydrophobia," replied

INDIGESTION ENDS.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of a case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach if you will occasionally take a little Diapepsin after eating.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Biliousness, Heartburn, Water-brash, Pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. Each triangle will digest all the food you can eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour.

Get a large 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist and start taking to-day and by tomorrow you will actually brag about your healthy, strong Stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of purgatives or any other assistance.

"Don't be silly, Mr. Anderson," began Lucy in soothing tones. "You won't have hydrophobia; that little dog only scratched you."

"I'm not thinking about hydrophobia. It's an entirely different kind of disease."

"YOU'RE NOT GOING TO BITE, ARE YOU?"

the eyes of Western Canada, and the Middle States, are turned toward Melville, Sask., watching a thriving city grow from the bare prairie. In Melville today there are some 1200 people, by the end of a year there will be 5,000 and possibly more.

The people of the West are accustomed to see towns spring up in a few months but Melville has eclipsed all previous records. Its wonderful growth is due, in a very large extent, to the fact that the Grand Trunk Pacific R. R. has selected it as the chief divisional point in Western Canada and from the prairie section, and the numerous branch lines, will be controlled.

Apart from the influence of the railroad the fertility of the surrounding country is causing Melville to jump to the foremost rank amongst western Canadian towns. During the present winter, though yet in its infancy, the farmers from a radius of 50 miles shipped their wheat, oats and barley from Melville on account of the excellent handling and transportation facilities afforded by the Grand Trunk Pacific. This year several additional huge elevators and grain warehouses will be built there, in order to facilitate the shipment of grain from a farming district which is coming to the front almost as rapidly as Melville itself. Last week a large party of wealthy American farmers stopped at Melville and purchased several sections of wheat land in the immediate vicinity of the town. In the spring others will come up from the south to buy land, for the heavy yields obtained by those already farming in the Melville district show what the land is capable of producing. Last fall several farmers threshed an average of over 50 bushels of wheat to the acre, while oats went as high as 75 bushels to the acre within two and three miles of the town.

Jerome's Appearance In Pantomime. Jerome K. Jerome, the humorist and playwright, whose successful play, "The Passing of the Third-Floor Back," has been transferred to Terry's Theatre, London, knows from long experience much of the ins and outs of stage life. One of the early vicissitudes of his life as an actor was to be offered his choice of playing the part of either a soldier or a donkey in a pantomime—a real donkey with four legs. After careful consideration he thought the red coat the more becoming disguise, and chose the part of the soldier. Apparently he made a mistake, from the point of view of success, at all events, for a few days afterwards the manager came to him and said, "You made a great mistake, Jerome, in not taking the part of the donkey. It would just suit you, and there's five shillings a week more in it."

ASKED LUCY.

Carlisle. "You know, I believe you can think yourself into such things. I'll never give it another thought." And he laughed his merriest laugh.

Before leaving the house Carlisle looked around to see if he could catch a second glance of the doctor's daughter, but evidently she had gone upstairs.

That night in his room Carlisle thought very little about his bandaged hand, but somehow as he sat smoking his cigar and trying to read the evening paper a girl's face constantly appeared before him.

He did not think he was in danger of hydrophobia, but he did think he wanted to see that girl again. But how to do it? What excuse had he to offer? In the morning the hand was practically well, but Carlisle had his man tie it in clean bandages, and instead of scowling at the pain he actually smiled during the process.

An hour later found him in the doctor's office.

"My dear fellow, the hand is perfectly healed—it was nothing but a scratch." The doctor looked over the rim of his glasses in amazement.

"Think I needn't come again, then, do you?" inquired Carlisle.

"Certainly not," assured the doctor.

"Your daughter—er—she never helps you in the office, does she?" stammered Carlisle.

"Heavens, no!" declared the doctor. "I don't think she's even in the house."

Carlisle's face had lost a great deal of its animation when he walked down the stoop. His ruse had failed. He did not grudge the $5 he had paid the doctor. He would willingly pay five times that amount to see the girl again. But how?

A week later Mrs. Scott-Burden gave a small dinner, and Carlisle was among the last guests to arrive. In the dressing room he met Billy Brewster.

"Have you set your lamps on the Standing Girl, Carlisle?" asked Billy. "Talk about your peaches!" he continued. "She's just out—the daughter of old Dr. Standing, you know, the old fellow that!"

He got no further. Carlisle walked up to him and took him by the shoulder.

"Is that girl here tonight?" he demanded.

"She certainly is," assured Billy, searching Carlisle's face to make sure he was entirely harmless. "But what's that to you?" he added.

"Help me to bind up this hand, will you?" asked Carlisle, ignoring the question.

"Well, I'll be hanged! What's the matter with you, anyway?" said Billy.

"A dog bit me," informed Carlisle as the task was completed and they started for the drawing room.

Mrs. Scott-Burden gave delightful dinners, and this one was no exception. Carlisle Anderson was seated beside the "peachy Standing girl." Billy Brewster leaned over toward his hostess.

"Did you ever hear that Carlisle Anderson had flighty spells?" he asked with some concern.

"All men do at times," answered Mrs. Scott-Burden. "At present he seems to be soaring with Lucy Standing. But why do you ask?"

"He did such a queer thing tonight about that perfectly good left hand of his." Then, directing his conversation to Carlisle, he sung out, "How's your hand, old man?"

"Better, thanks, better," Carlisle answered shortly and turned immediately to Miss Standing.

"Do you believe in this new thought fad, Miss Standing?" asked Carlisle—"all this rot about thinking yourself into a lot of things and out of a lot more?"

"Don't be silly, Mr. Anderson," began Lucy in soothing tones. "You won't have hydrophobia; that little dog only scratched you."

"I'm not thinking about hydrophobia. It's an entirely different kind of disease."

"Incurable?" inquired Lucy.

"Can't say, never having had it before," said Carlisle as he laughed.

"Is it catching?" persisted Lucy.

"Can't say as to that either, but I hope so," announced Carlisle.

Lucy laughed, and the other guests waited to know what the joke was.

"We were just discussing the new thought movement," interrupted Carlisle, in fear of Lucy telling the truth.

Later in the evening Carlisle and Lucy found themselves alone in a cozy nook in the library.

"Do you feel better?" asked Lucy as she poked her tiny feet close to the burning coals.

"Nope—getting worse every minute," announced Carlisle cheerfully as he pulled his chair a bit closer.

"You're not going to bite, are you?" asked Lucy, turning her head to a most tantalizing angle.

"This bandage of mine is getting very loose," began Carlisle. "Would you mind tying it up tighter for me?"

Lucy drew the knot in the large handkerchief a bit tighter, and as she touched the hand her face flushed. She glanced up into Carlisle's face and blushed again.

"Funny about that hand of yours," Lucy announced. "Father told me it was nothing but a scratch, and here you are nursing it for a week. Men are such babies. They think they are sick when really—"

"I am sick—in my heart," said Carlisle in a low voice.

"Mr. Carlisle!"

"What's that these new thought people keep saying, 'As a man thinketh, so in his heart is he?' And Miss Standing—Lucy—I can think of nothing but you. It's a new thought all right, and it's the best thought I ever had in my life. This hand with its hydrophobia symptoms" (here he ripped off the improvised bandage) "was used to stir up your sympathy. I kept thinking about that and decided it was not your sympathy, but you love, that I wanted."

"You want me," echoed Lucy slowly, as if in great wonderment.

"As I never wanted anything in my life," he affirmed. "Let me prove it to you, little girl, won't you?"

Footsteps were heard coming up the hall. There was no mistaking Carlisle's earnestness as he continued:

"At least don't say 'No' to me. Let me come and see you and maybe in time—"

The curtains parted, and Mrs. Scott-Burden entered to hear Lucy reply in a somewhat shaky voice:

"Well, you had better come around and see father—you know, he's the doctor."

When John Was in Doubt.

John was a coachman who took life most seriously and, being very particular, would return frequently in the course of the day to make sure he understood the orders that had been given him in the morning. One afternoon he presented himself before his mistress and began:

"Mrs. T., Oi'm not quite certain ez to Mr. T.'s ordher this mornin'. Oi was droivin' him to the thrain, an' he noticed that the horse was lame, an' he told me to do somethin' to him, mum; but, sure, Oi don't know whither he told me to shoe him or to shoot him. Mebbe ye can tell me."

A shoeing was evidently required, but the execution of the order and likewise of the horse was deferred until Mr. T. returned.

Money Found In Piano.

A young couple who recently got married in Glasgow had among their goods an old-fashioned square piano bearing the date of 1789. It was purchased merely a piece of furniture. They called in a piano-tuner to see if he could better the tone of the instrument.

While handling it he came on a piece of paper, and, pulling it out, handed it to the owner, who on reading it found the faded handwriting to run thus: "Lucky one, who'er you be, this little story is all for thee; if many months you've got to feed, t'will help you in your time of need."

On closer examination a small canvas bag with £15 in notes was found. The piano cost them 40 shillings. A bag in in itself, with this marriage present thrown in.

The Hermit Crab.

The hermit crab is one of nature's freaks. Having no proper shell of his own, he takes possession of the empty house of a sea snail, winkle or other mollusk. It is not true, however, that he first kills and devours the owner. There are always plenty of vacant shells to supply him and his kind with a domicile. Like any other crab, he grows, and from time to time he finds himself obliged to move into a larger tenement. He may not always find one that suits him perfectly when he wishes to make a change, just like people, but he must take the best he can find. This will account for the fact that you often see a hermit crab dragging about a dwelling entirely too big for him.

Do You Open Your Mouth?

Like a young bird andgulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies under sealed. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, oftentimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

MORE DEADLY.

Opium Is Mild Compared to Green Cordial of France.

The importance of the temperance crusade in Canada is mild compared to the absolute necessity for ridding France, and especially Paris, of the curse of absinthe. In fact, public men of that country say it would be a blessing if the working-men of the republic could be persuaded to turn to the intoxicants used in the Dominion, such as beer, whisky, and wine.

It is argued that whatever ill effects overindulgence in these may have it is mild compared to the devastating horrors of the green cordial that saps the brain and in a few years converts a strong, healthy, normal man into a maniac or murderer, or both.

The effect of absinthe is at first dulling. Some of the narcotic power of the drug first exercises its influence. Then comes an exhilaration, an excitement. One glass is nothing; it is only a temptation, an incentive. Seated at his table, oblivious of everything but the green poison before him, the victim of the habit pours the seductive drug into his veins. It acts like the draught from the opium smoker's pipe or the sensation from the needle of the morphine user.

But it is said by neurologists that the effect is deadlier because sleep is slower in coming. The poppy taken from the pipe or from the needle induces unconsciousness, but the absinthe drinker goes on from draught to draught until finally he is so completely out of himself that no extreme of crime, daring or abasement daunts him.

WHERE PRETTY GIRLS LIVE.

Sir Francis Galton After Exhaustive Search Says "London."

Are the prettiest girls in Great Britain to be found in London? Mr. Francis Galton, who has studied the subject, says "Yes." The famous scientist forms this conclusion after years of careful study of the women of England. He invented a "beauty chart," which he worked when walking about the streets of the various cities.

When going out he took in his pocket a small piece of paper cut in the shape of a Maltese cross, but with only three arms, so that the paper was, in a way, divided into three sections. One of these sections was labelled "Attractive," another "Indifferent," and the third "Repellent." The paper also bore the name of the city and the date upon which the investigations were made. Mr. Galton's other instrument was a "pricker" made from a pin with a large head embedded in a paper sheath, only the point projecting.

With his paper cross and his "pricker" in his pocket Mr. Galton forth. When a girl passed him whom he considered pretty the point of the pricker was gently pressed against the section of the cross marked "Attractive," and the pin-prick registered the presence of a beauty. If the girl chanced to be ugly the instrument ticked her off in the "Repellent" section, and if ordinary she found a place among the "Indifferent."

On arriving home at the end of his investigations Mr. Galton would take his paper cross from his pocket, add up the pin-holes in the various sections, strike an average, and allot to the particular city its place in his "beauty chart."

Nobody will dispute that there are thousands of perfect and lovely women in London. But for single specimens many towns could supply a type of womanly beauty who would compare equally with those in London. Aberdeen occupies the bottom place on Mr. Galton's chart. It would be interesting to know how Manchester stood, because the percentage of pretty women in Cottonopolis is extremely high. The Liverpool girl is a very fine type, slimly built and very pretty. Then there are the Devonshire girl and the maid of Cornwall—solid women, well proportioned, and winsome to a degree. In proportion to its size Wrexham has a good percentage of pretty girls.

Growth of Nails.

A scientist has estimated that in a lifetime of 70 years man grows nails which, if it were possible to preserve them uncut, would reach the length of 7 feet 9 inches.

Exactly on what argument this statement is based it is hard to say, for a little observation will show that during the greater portion of a man's life he cuts his nails on an average of once a week, and at each paring removes a sixteenth of an inch, or the equivalent of a quarter of an inch per month, working out at three inches a year.

This would give him a growth of 7 feet 6 inches during the thirty years he lives between twenty and fifty, says The St. Louis Post-Despatch. In the other forty years, when the growth is less rapid, he would certainly produce four feet of nails, so that eleven feet is a better average for the nail-producing capacity of a man.

It should be noted, however, that the growth of the nails on the right hand is, in most people, more rapid than those on the left hand, and it may be that the scientist in question has based his argument on the slower growth of the left hand nails.

Another curious point is that the rate of growth of the nails depends directly on the length of the finger; thus, the nails on the two middle fingers of men grow more rapidly than those on the first and third fingers.

GREAT MEN WHO HAVE PROVED ZAM-BUK.

Scientist, Analyst, Magistrate and War Correspondent all testify

Men and women great in point of knowledge, position and experience, say that Zam-Buk stands superior to all other healing substances. Read the opinions of the following eminent men:

Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N. S., a magistrate, a School Commissioner, and Baptist Deacon, says: Zam-Buk cured me of eczema on my ankle, which had defied every other remedy tried during twenty years. It also cured me of piles, and I take pleasure in recommending it to my fellow-men."

Mr. Frank Scudamore, the famous war correspondent, who has gone through twenty-nine battles, and whose dispatches during the Boer War were so eagerly read from coast to coast in Canada, says:—"Owing to the poisonous dye from an underground penetrating a slight scratch, my legs broke out in ulcers. At one time I had seventeen deep holes in my left leg, into each of which I could put my thumb, and had fourteen similar ulcers on my right leg. Remedy after remedy failed to heal these, and I was well nigh worn out with pain and lack of sleep. Zam-Buk was introduced, and I am glad to say that it gave me speedy relief. A few weeks' treatment resulted in a perfect cure of all the ulcers."

Dr. Andrew Wilson, whose reputation as scientist is world-wide, in a book recently published ("Homely Talks on First-Aid") says:—"Zam-Buk may be relied upon as an antiseptic dressing which requires no preparation, and has the particular advantage of possessing unique healing properties."

Mr. W. Lascelles-Scott, the famous analyst to the Royal Commission for Victoria, says:—"I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk. It is of great healing power for open wounds or injuries."

So one could go on quoting authority after authority, all of the opinion, based on personal tests, that Zam-Buk should be in every home. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cuts, burns, scratches, cold-sores, chapped hands, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm, blood-poisoning, and eczema. It is also used extensively for piles, for which it is without equal. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, 3 for $1.25; or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. You are warned against harmless imitations.

Some Royal Babies.

Royal babies in the days of long ago generally had two cradles, one for every day, and another, a very grand one, for state occasions, when visitors came to see them and kiss their tiny hands, in courtier fashion. Little Prince Edward, afterwards Edward VI., was taken so much care of that no one was allowed to go near his cradle without an order signed by the king. He had two nurses, "Mother Jak" and "Sibilla Penne," and four "rockers;" that is, people to rock the cradle. James I. actually had five rockers, one of whom was called Jane Crummy. When he began to toddle he was assisted by leading strings of rose-colored silk. It was not all joy to be born in a palace in those days. Nobody might take the little princeeling up but the proper person, or hunt for the pin that was pricking him; and if that person was absent the baby might scream himself hoarse, and nothing could be done. It was, as a writer of that time said, a "real misery."

Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

Mr. H. F. Dickens, K.C., tells an interesting story concerning the original manuscript of his father's famous "Carol." The novelist presented the MS. to Thomas Milton, an old schoolfellow. In 1875 Mr. Milton sold it to Mr. Francis Harvey, a bookseller, for £50. Then it passed into the hands of Mr. George Churchill, an enthusiastic autograph collector. Mr. Churchill treasured it until 1882, when circumstances compelled him to part with it. After photographing every page of it, it was sold to Mr. Bennett, a Birmingham bookseller and curio dealer, who eventually found a purchaser who readily signed a cheque for £200 for it. Finally, it was bought by Mr. Stuart M. Samuel, of Kensington Palace Gardens, for £300, who is said to still retain the precious document.

French Peas Made In America.

A bright little housekeeper who does her own cooking was asked by a neighbor who happened to be her guest how she could afford to have such delicious French peas so often when they were so expensive.

"I'll tell you my secret," said the hostess, "and that is that they aren't French peas at all. They are just the common American canned variety. But to give them the delicate French taste you must put about a teaspoonful of sugar with them while they are cooking, after you have seasoned them with the usual amount of salt, pepper and butter. Don't make the mistake of using too much sugar, though. A level spoonful to a can of peas is sufficient. A rather celebrated chef told my mother that long ago."

"He must have been a descendant of one of those devoted chefs of the 'terroir' in France, when a cook was expected to make an entree out of a slipper if nothing else offered.

"He had a way of making indifferent coffee taste delicious, too, that I follow, and bless his memory for it. That is to pour the ground coffee into a tin, place this over the fire and wait till a rich aroma arises, but don't let there be any suspicion of burning. Then make your coffee in any one of the hundred correct ways you happen to have been taught and observe the improvement."—New York Post.

than of those on the left hand, and it may be that the scientist in question has based his argument on the slower growth of the left hand nails.

Another curious point is that the rate of growth of the nails depends directly on the length of the finger; thus, the nails on the two middle fingers of men grow more rapidly than those on the first and third fingers, respectively, and these in turn are more speedy in their growth than those on the little fingers.

What the Bridegroom Resents.

"Even the English language emphasizes the insignificance of a man at his own wedding," said the prospective bridegroom disconsolately. "There isn't an independent word to designate him. He is merely called the groom of the bride, as if he were just about on a level with the bridesmaids and a little below the maid of honor. Best man, of course, means the bridegroom's best man, but the phrase itself tends to exalt this individual at the expense of his superior."

"Then there's no adjective to describe what pertains to the male half of the affair. You can't speak of the 'bridegroomal' trousers or necktie. On the other hand, 'bridal' applies not only to the possessions of the girl, but to what relates to both of them equally, like the trip and the bridal chamber. The very words 'matrimony' and 'matrimonial' are from the feminine side only. 'Patrimony' has nothing to do with the nuptials. It applies only to wealth and signifies that a man's part in the affair is to get out and hustle for the cash."—New York Times.

Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis Cough, Grip, Asthma, Diphtheria

Cresolene is a boon to Asthmatics

Does it not seem more effective to breathe in a remedy to cure disease of the breathing organs than to take a remedy into the stomach? This is because the air rendered strongly antiseptic is carried over the diseased surface with every breath, giving prolonged and constant treatment. It is invaluable to mothers with small children.

Those of a consumptive tendency find immediate relief from coughs or inflamed conditions of the throat.

THE COMMON APPLE A GREAT SOURCE OF HEALTH

The Juice of the Ordinary Apple Is One of the Best Things in the World For Keeping the Blood Pure.

Few people there are but enjoy a ripe, juicy apple. But how many realize that it is a medicine as well as a treat?

Apple juice has a very marked effect on the kidneys, increasing their power to throw off the waste products of the body, called urea, and thus prevent Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, and similar troubles that come from poisoned blood.

Similarly, other fruits stimulate the action of the liver and bowels—others of the skin. Combined, they keep the blood pure—the body clean and healthy.

To get this effect, however, one must eat a great deal of fruit, or better, eat a little fruit and take "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" are tablets in which the juices of ripe fruits, with their medicinal value intensified, are combined with valuable tonics. They act directly on Bowels, Kidneys and Skin and put them in perfect condition—thus ensuring the thorough elimination of all waste matter and poisons from the body. Trial box 25c. Regular size 50c.—6 boxes for $2.50. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A PARISIAN HAIR CUT.

It Is Expensive at Times, but Always a Sociable Affair.

The Paris hairdresser cannot be persuaded to do anything more than pretend to remove a little hair. It almost breaks his heart if you insist on a serviceable cut.

The price charged is sometimes a painful surprise to the unsuspecting visitor. He has been warned to avoid those establishments where the tariff is not displayed and so does not hesitate when he sees the announcement, "Hair Cutting, 1 Franc."

When the operation is over, however, he is a little hurt at being asked for 3 francs.

If he knows enough French to understand, he gathers that 1 franc is for the hair cutting, 1 franc for a "friction" and 1 franc for "perfume."

Frenchmen pay these charges without complaining and seem to enjoy a visit to the barber's. As they generally go to the same shop—and Frenchmen have their hair "cut" once a week—the assistant becomes their confidential friend.

His customers discuss with him their love affairs, their ailments and lastly their business.

He is also supposed to be a great authority on horse racing, but he is too prudent to act on his own tips and generally manages to save enough money to start in business for himself.—London Mail.

ANATOMY.

A More or Less Helpful Lesson For Beginners.

Proceeding in a southerly direction from the torso, we have the hips, useful for padding, and the legs. The legs hold up the body and are sometimes used in walking, but when riding in automobiles they take up valuable space which otherwise might be employed to better advantage.

Attached to the legs are the feet. Some varieties of feet are cold. Some people are born with cold feet, others acquire cold feet, and still others have cold feet thrust upon them.

The surface of the body is covered with cuticle, which either hangs in graceful loops or is stretched tightly from bone to bone.

On the face it is known as complexion and is used extensively for commercial purposes by dermatologists, painters and decorators.

Between the cuticle and the bones are the muscles, which hold the bones together and prevent them from falling out and littering up the sidewalk as we walk along.

Packed neatly and yet compactly inside the body are the heart, the liver and the lungs; also the gall, which in Americans is abnormally large.

These organs are used occasionally by the people who own them, but their real purpose is to furnish surgeons a living.—Thomas L. Masson in Lippincott's.

A Free Handed Prince.

The following is told of the famous Prince of Conde. He left his son, aged nine years, 50 louis d'or to spend while he himself was absent in Paris. On his return the boy came to him triumphantly, saying:

"Papa, here is all the money safe. I have never touched it once."

The prince, without making any reply, took his son to the window and quietly emptied all the money out of the purse into the street. Then he said:

"If you have neither virtue enough to give away your money nor spirit enough to spend it, always do this for the future, that the poor may have a chance of it."

CHINA'S GRAND CANAL.

Sometimes It Holds Water Enough to Float the Boats.

Of some of the crude and outgrown methods used on China's Grand canal a writer in the North China Daily News remarks: "The junction of the real canal with the Wei river was not by means of a lock, but simply a high and steeply sloping mud bank, over which the grain vessels had to be dragged by the force of perhaps many hundreds of men. It should be borne in mind that in China the lock of a canal is not much more like our idea of what that name connotes than it is like a padlock. Amid constant and often serious changes of level, with an uncertain and not infrequently a scanty supply of water, and with a grain fleet which traveled in blocks of some eighty vessels under one officer, it was necessary to devise some way for keeping them together and for transferring them as a consolidated unit with this in view.

"For this reason a Chinese lock on the Grand canal is nothing but a stone gateway into which large boards may be lowered through a groove in the stones, restraining most of the water from its flow, until there is a depth sufficient to float all the craft, when the boards are pulled up and the entire fleet passes through.

"After this the boards are again lowered for another division of the grain boats. In case the water gives out—a by no means unlikely occurrence—there is nothing to do but to wait until more comes from somewhere."

THREE EMPIRES.

Governments That Practically Sprang Into Being Overnight.

Prior to Jan. 18, 1871, the German empire, as we know it today, had no existence. Instead it was a jumble of kingdoms, states, duchies, grand duchies and principalities, all joined together by a like language and common political aspirations, it is true, but otherwise quite separate and distinct.

Then came the historic ceremony in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles. Paris had just been captured by King William of Prussia, and it was held to be a fitting time and place to proclaim him the first German emperor. Never since the dawn of history was an empire born more dramatically.

By a strange irony of fate, too, its birth took place amid the ruins of the French empire, itself the creation of a day, or, rather, to be strictly accurate, of a night. France went to bed on the evening of Dec. 1, 1851, a republic.

When it awoke next morning it was an empire. During the hours of darkness Paris had been occupied by troops, and the prince-president had become Napoleon III.

Equally sudden and almost as sensational in its way was the birth of the modern Greek empire. After the yoke of the Turks had been thrown off in the war of independence the country became a republic. But the people soon tired of that democratic form of government and promptly proceeded to assassinate their first and only president. Then they met together, elected a king and settled themselves down to be ruled by him in a quite orderly and contented fashion.

RHEUMATIC TREATMENT

Some Simple Precautions Which Will Prevent a Recurrence of Attacks.

A prominent citizen, who had for years suffered from rheumatism and rheumatic gout, has been giving his friends the benefit of his experience, and incidentally a copy of the prescription which was of material assistance in effecting a cure.

In the first place, he found that every time he partook freely of acid fruits his old trouble returned; and, secondly, he learned that it was absolutely essential to keep the kidneys active. To do this it was necessary to drink plenty of water. Occasionally he would dissolve a lithia tablet in the water to assist its action on the kidneys.

The treatment is as follows: Procure from your druggist:—

Fluid Extract Cascara.....  $\frac{3}{4}$  oz.
Syrup Rhubarb ..... 1 oz.
Carriana Compound ..... 1 oz.
Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla 5 oz.

Take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

This is valuable information. This can be mixed at home. Save the prescription.

MRS. MARY MEYER.

MRS. MARY MEYER, Thomson Avenue, near Shell Road, Winfield, L. I., N. Y., writes:

"I have been annoyed with a cough for years. Often it was so bad that I could not sleep half the night. Many people thought I had consumption."

Consumption Was Feared. "A woman recommended Peruna to me two years ago.

I began to take Peruna, and now I am perfectly free from a cough. I am glad to say that Peruna cured me entirely."

"I take Peruna occasionally, when I do not feel well, and I also give it to my children."

"Peruna is the best medicine for coughs and colds. I have told many people how much Peruna has helped me."

Mrs. Hettie Green, R. R. No. 6, Iuka, Ill., writes as follows of the efficacy of Peruna:

"Last November I had catarrh and felt so miserable I thought that I would go into consumption."

"I tried so many doctors and medicines, but nothing did me any good, only Peruna."

"After I began the use of Peruna I began to improve in every way. My head did not hurt so much, my stomach is all right, my bowels are regular, my appetite good, my complexion clear, my eyes are bright and am gaining in flesh and strength."

"I think Peruna has no equal as a catharr remedy."

Peruna tends to lessen the cough, decreases the expectoration, strengthens the patient, increases the appetite and in many cases procures sound, refreshing sleep.

MISS BEULAH B. BROOME.

Miss Beulah B. Broome, 409 12th St., N. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I have suffered from weak lungs and catarrhal troubles for four years, brought on by many neglected colds, but on the recommendation of a friend I gave Peruna an honest trial and I am pleased to state that it restored me to perfect health. There is not the slightest trace of catarrh in my system and my lungs are perfectly sound."

"I unhesitatingly give this testimonial."

Mrs. William Hohmann, 509 N. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I suffered with catarrh of the bronchial tubes and had a terrible cough ever since a child. After a while it got so bad I had to cough both winter and summer. Finally, I burst a blood vessel in my throat from the strain of coughing, next a blood vessel in my stomach, so I kept getting worse and doctoring, and even then could get no relief. I thought, and everybody else, that I had consumption."

"Reading the papers about Peruna I decided to try it, without the least bit of hope that it would do me any good. But after taking three bottles I noticed a change. My appetite got better, so I kept on, never got discouraged."

"Finally I seemed not to cough so much, and the pains in my chest got better. I am well now. I cannot tell you how grateful I am, and I cannot thank Peruna enough. It has cured where doctors have failed. People who think they have consumption better give it a trial."

MISS JOSIE SCHAETZEL.

Miss Josie Schaetzel, General Delivery, Appleton, Wisconsin, writes:

"I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs in very short order, and it was not long until it developed into a serious case of catarrh. Every morning I would raise a lot of phlegm, which was very disagreeable. My digestion was poor and my lungs sore."

"After a few doses of Peruna I began to mend, and felt that if I kept on taking it it would not be long until I would be well. I was right, for in four weeks I was well again."

"I think Peruna is a grand medicine and wish to add my testimony to many others you have."

The fight against consumption is becoming a national problem.

Everywhere we hear of sanatoriums established at the expense of the state for the treatment of the vast army of consumptives.

The open air treatment, fresh air and sunlight, are recognized by the medical profession generally as being the greatest necessities in the treatment of consumption in all its stages.

Dr. Hartman has for many years advocated the fresh air treatment for consumption. At the same time he has recognized Peruna as a useful palliative for the many distressing symptoms which accompany the white plague.

The promptness with which Peruna relieves a fresh cold, and even removes chronic colds, is well-known. This ranks Peruna as a reliable prophylactic against consumption.

Various experts have attempted to guess on the origin of the term greyhound, some authority claiming that the prefix grey is taken from the Greek meaning Greek; others that it signifies great, while still others say that it has reference to the color of the animal. In no other breed of hounds is the blue or gray color so prevalent, and consequently the last mentioned derivation seems the most plausible.—London Notes and Queries.

The Modern Herring.

"Extract of smoke," said the canner, dipping his brush into a pot of brown fluid.

"Extract of smoke?" repeated the dazed reporter.

"Smoke extract," said the canner.

He took up a fresh herring, painted it with a dark mixture and laid it on a board, beside a long, long line of brother herrings.

"Now, in the past," he explained, "you smoked herrings by hanging them up for days in smokehouses wherein smoldered fires of costly aromatic woods. That process was slow and expensive; we have quite improved it out of existence. We paint our herring now with this really quite harmless chemical extract of smoke—a coal-tar product—and as soon as he is dry he is ready for the market."

The reporter tasted one of the herrings.

"But this isn't half as good as the smoked herrings of my boyhood," he protested.

"Not as good, perhaps," agreed the canner, "but ever so much more profitable."

LA GRIPPE'S VICTIMS

Left Weak, Miserable and a Prey to Disease in Many Forms

La Grippe starts with a sneeze—and ends with a complication of troubles. It lays the strong man on his back; it tortures him with fevers and chills, headaches and backaches. It leaves him a prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, consumption and other deadly diseases. You can avoid La Grippe entirely by keeping your blood rich and red by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If you have not done this, and the disease lays you low, you can banish all its evil after-effects with this same great blood-building, nerve restoring medicine. Here is proof of the wonderful power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over disease:

Mr. P. E. Paulin, Collector of

Customs at Caraquet, N. B., says: "In the winter of 1907 I had a very severe attack of la grippe, which broke me down entirely. I had to take to bed for several weeks. During that time I employed a doctor, but without benefit, in fact I seemed to be getting worse and worse. I did not sleep; suffered from night sweats, and had no appetite. I was really a physical wreck. On a former occasion I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for general debility, with great benefit so I decided to again try them. I sent for half dozen boxes and began to use them at once.

When taking the second box I began to feel quite a change in my condition. I was able to walk about the house and my appetite was improving. From that on I gained strength every day, and before the six boxes were done I was able to return to the office and attend to my work. Now

I enjoy the best of health, and although 63 years old, am feeling quite young. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a splendid medicine for troubles of this kind."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blood-making, nerve-restoring tonic. In this way they cure anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, and partial paralysis. They are the best medicine in the world for the ailments of girlhood and womanhood. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE REASON WHY.

How a Bumptious Young Lawyer Turned the Laugh on Himself.

The counsel prosecuting in a breach of promise case was youthful and fresh, and delighted in showing himself off, but he didn't know what a guy he was until it fell on him with a dull and sickening thud. The defendant had entered the witness-box.

"You say," said the counsel, after several impudent questions, "that you never asked the plaintiff to be your wife?"

"Never," responded the witness, with emphasis.

"But you made love to her?" "Not to my knowledge."

"Never called her pet names, either, I suppose?"

"No, sir."

"Now, as a matter of fact, didn't you call her Lizzie after you'd been to see her only three or four times, and always after that, when you knew you should have called her

A Tale of Love and Disappointment

CHAPTER XIII.—(Cont'd.)

Joel was thoroughly enjoying his victory. Everything had gone in the way he had wished. Rebekah was content, and he had conquered. He felt that he could rest on his laurels, and he made up his mind to be particularly nice to Lord Harecastle. He went to the drawing-room and brought him back to the study.

"I'm a beast," Harecastle cried angrily, "and I have to thank you for it."

"No more of that!" Joel said angrily. "We start afresh now. You have carried out your promise, and you seem to have done it well. You won't find me ungrateful. Just run your eye through this and see if it is all right."

"A marriage has been arranged, and will shortly take place, between Rebekah, only daughter of Joel Joseph, Esq., of Park Lane and Leighton Manor, and Lord Harecastle, only son of the Earl of Wolverholme," Harecastle read slowly.

"Yes, I think that is correct, but you are losing no time," he added grimly.

"It is only proper that it should be announced at once."

And in a day or two Ethel Fetherston would read this announcement. Harecastle had not considered this and it caused him keen pain. What would she think of him? Within a few hours of breaking off his engagement to enter into a fresh one! It would drive away every bit of her affection for him, for no one could continue to love one she must think to be so base.

"Won't you keep it back for a few days?" he asked imploringly.

"Why should I?" Joel asked curtly.

"My engagement with Miss Fetherston was only broken off this morning. It is unseemly."

"You are still thinking of that woman. What's the use? A day or two will not make any difference."

"I suppose not," Harecastle said dully.

"What about the marriage? Shall we say in a month's time?"

"That is rather soon. We must let my father get a bit stronger."

"I am anxious to see you settled. Shall we say a couple of months?"

"That is a question for your daughter; I am in her hands. Here she is. For Heaven's sake, be careful, Joel," Harecastle said hurriedly.

Rebekah came in and sat down on the arm of her father's chair. He placed his arm round her and playfully pinched her cheek.

"This impatient lover of yours is talking about marriage; he seems very anxious to take you from me," Joel said mendaciously.

A startled look was Rebekah's answer, and Harecastle gave a quick but angry look at his tormentor.

"We are talking about a couple of months," Joel said tentatively.

"That's not nearly long enough. I shall have heaps and heaps of things to get ready," Rebekah re-

"I will run down to Wolverholme Castle. I, too, should like to see the Earl. I suppose you have no objection," he said in an off-hand manner.

"No, perhaps you will make the interview a less embarrassing one. Your presence may ward off some awkward questions," Harecastle said reflectively.

"I expect the Earl will be rather surprised. When I last saw him he said that there was absolutely no chance of your marrying my daughter. I told him that you should marry her, and he laughed at me."

Joel was right, for the Earl was dumbfounded when they told him the news. He looked from one to the other in so perplexed a manner that Joel indulged in a hearty laugh.

"I wish you joy," the Earl said at last. "You have satisfied the one desire of my life. And you, too, are pleased, eh, Joel?"

"I am quite satisfied," Joel replied, and his eyes wandered round the room, with its tokens of the ancient history of the family with which his daughter was about to ally herself.

When Harecastle had left the room, the Earl turned to Joel with a chuckle.

"You have brought it off, then. You are indeed a wonderful man, and I begin to understand the reason you made your millions. How did you manage it? I am interested to hear."

"Just a little tact and diplomacy. That was all that was needed," Joel answered evasively.

The Earl was not to be put off so easily.

"Tell me about it—everything," he said briskly.

"There is nothing to tell. I am afraid that you must be content with the result. Now let us talk about the marriage. If Cyril discusses the question with you, please remember that I want it hurried on."

Joel had assumed a rather dictatorial manner that was little to the Earl's taste, but he was forced to put up with it.

"I suppose you won't feel easy in your mind until the marriage has actually taken place. You are wonderfully keen on it, Joel. Now let us talk about the settlement," the Earl said briskly.

"I intend to settle a million on Rebekah," Joel replied simply.

"Very handsome, I'm sure. It is more than generous."

"That sum will be tied up strictly. I shall make Cyril a present of two hundred and fifty thousand. He can do what he likes with that. Of course the rest of my many millions will come to him on my death."

"How much is that?" Lord Wolverholme asked curiously.

"I cannot tell you exactly, but anything between four and five millions."

The Earl's eyes glistened at the thought of this vast sum coming into the possession of the family.

"By the bye, Wolverholme," Joel the way that she did for him. Not that she missed any of those little attentions dear to the heart of woman, for he was ever solicitous for her comfort, but she felt that he was animated by none of the passion that swayed her very being. She noticed little things—while she was conscious of a desire to caress him, he never seemed to care to touch her.

It suddenly occurred to her that he had never said in words that he loved her. She went back in memory through every interview, for each word was treasured in her heart. Did he really care for her, or—

Her father's wealth, could that be the reason? If so, she would prefer a life of endless misery, rather than owe her happiness to such an origin. She confided in no one, but her eyes, rendered keen by her suspicion, watched every word and movement of her fiancee. She began to analyze his manner towards her. Her life became desolate, for his very kisses had become embittered by the fact that she was wondering if they were but a pretence, and forced from him in his desire to carry out the deception.

Then, too, she noticed how persistently he avoided being alone with her, and this almost convinced her that he was playing a part. She cursed the money that could be the only reason. A doubt intervened. She was convinced for the moment that Cyril was a man of honor, and would not deceive her. Then, too, the Earl of Wolverholme had the reputation of being a man of wealth. Surely, then, money could not have tempted him. For a time she comforted herself with this, but not for long, for she was forced to see that his attitude was but little like that of a man who truly loved.

Mrs. Goldberg noticed that Rebekah was troubled, but did not care to interfere. She, too, was sure that Harecastle was not in love with her niece and she was completely mystified as to what was actuating him to marrying her. She spoke of it to Joel, but she was so firmly silenced that she did not dare venture to again refer to the subject.

The preparations for the marriage were being pushed rapidly forward. The ceremony was to take place in the chapel attached to Leighton Manor. Joel had determined that it should be as brilliant as money could make it. The Earl, who was in better health, was taking the keenest interests in the arrangements. Through his influence, Royalty had expressed its intention of being present at the wedding, and Joel's satisfaction was intense. But Rebekah received the news with an indifference that startled her father.

"No, sir."

The plaintiff pulled at the counsel's sleeve, but he paid no attention to her.

"Ah, indeed!" very sarcastically. "I presume you never called her Lizzie in your life, eh?"

"Never."

Again the plaintiff caught at the counsel, but he ignored her.

"Now, once more, sir, I ask you directly to state to the Court whether you did or did not call this young lady by the endearing name of Lizzie. Remember, sir, you are on your oath." And the counsel puffed out his chest, while the plaintiff made another ineffectual attempt to clutch him.

The defendant smiled slightly.

"I never did," he said, firmly. The counsel brought his fist down and simply glared at the defendant.

"I'd like to know why you never did, sir," he asked, with the air of a man who knew he had the facts.

The witness was as cool as a palm-leaf fan could make him in June as he replied, with an exasperating smile:

"Because that wasn't her name."

Then it was the counsel heeded the plaintiff's wild clutchings and wanted to hit himself in the neck with a law book, but it was too late.

very anxious to take you from me," Joel said mendaciously.

A startled look was Rebekah's answer, and Harecastle gave a quick but angry look at his tormentor.

"We are talking about a couple of months," Joel said tentatively. "That's not nearly long enough. I shall have heaps and heaps of things to get ready," Rebekah replied hastily.

"Don't make it too long; but we can talk about that to-morrow. I will run down in the morning to the Earl, and I warrant you he will give me a warm welcome. He will be proud of his daughter-in-law. Don't you think so, Harecastle?"

"My father will be delighted," Harecastle replied gravely. "I have some work to do. You two children must run away," Joel said playfully.

"It's rather late, I ought to be going," Harecastle interrupted quickly.

"Nonsense! It's only ten o'clock. We will have a whisky and soda and a final cigar at eleven. Get along."

Harecastle made a great effort to be natural. He could not force himself to make love to Rebekah, but he talked as he had never talked before; but that hour seemed an eternity. And to think that he would have to play this tragedy for lifetime! The thought was agonizing, and Joel's entrance came as a welcome relief.

When alone he once more referred to the question of an early marriage, but Harecastle curtly refused to discuss the matter.

"I am tired out, you must leave it over till you see my father."

"As you please, Cyril," Joel replied.

It was the first time that he had used Harecastle's Christian name, and the latter flushed warmly, but he refrained from making any remark. For after all was he not to be his father-in-law, and would he not have the right so to call him? But the idea was very distasteful.

When he got to his chambers, he reviewed the day's happenings, but there was nothing but loathing of the role that he had been forced to play. His predominant feeling for Rebekah was that of pity. He made up his mind to sacrifice himself in every way to forward her well-being, and for a moment he considered the idea of throwing himself upon her mercy in the belief that her suffering would be compensated for by the avoiding of a loveless marriage. But no, he could not do that, for Joel would certainly carry out his threat, and make public to the world his father's treachery.

His thoughts turned to Ethel Fetherston with indescribable longing, and he determined to write to her to prepare her for the coming announcement of his engagement. He sat with pen in hand, but utterly failed to find words that would in the least excuse himself. He, too, had to consider Rebekah, and such was the fineness of his character that he recognized the loyalty that was her due.

Rebekah herself was reveling in her newly acquired happiness. Mrs. Goldberg had forced herself to conceal the uneasiness that existed in her mind, and she tried to share her niece's joy, but her heart was filled with a dull foreboding that she could not explain.

CHAPTER XIV.

Lord Harecastle was surprised to receive an early visit from Joel, the morning after the engagement.

lions will come to him on my death."

"How much is that?" Lord Wolverhampton asked curiously.

"I cannot tell you exactly, but anything between four and five millions."

The Earl's eyes glistened at the thought of this vast sum coming into the possession of the family.

"By the bye, Wolverhampton," Joel continued familiarly, "now that things are fixed up, I don't want you to be short of money. Draw on me for anything in reason."

"Yes—familiarity could be put up on with such terms," was the Earl's thought as he received this pleasing intelligence. He was looking very cheerful, and their errand had evidently done him good.

The next day, the news of the engagement was received by the fashionable world, and both Rebekah and Cyril were busy receiving the congratulations of their many friends.

As much as possible Harecastle tried to avoid being alone with his fiancee, but every one seemed to conspire to give them those opportunities so dear to lovers, and he found the strain of playing his part wellnigh unbearable. Then, too, Rebekah was growing used to the engagement, and she now had time to think. As the days went by, Harecastle would often meet her eyes fixed reflectively on him, and she would turn quickly away as though she had been caught in some wrongful act. For Rebekah was beginning to be suspicious that Harecastle did not care for her in

WILL CURE BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Le Petit Bois Franc, Temiscouata Co., Que., Jan. 25 (Special).—Mr. Charles Cote, postmaster here, is firmly convinced that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Bright's Disease or any other disease of the Kidneys. He knows it from his own experience. Hear what he says:

The last one told me it was only a waste of money to try anything else as I could not live more than a year at the outside."

"At the verge of death I decided to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial. I used eighteen boxes and to-day my Rheumatism, Backache and Headache are gone. My urine is like that of a child. I feel I owe my life to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dingy Buildings in Which Millions of Pounds are Counted Annually.

Appearances are proverbially deceptive. Although times are changing, many a highly lucrative business is still carried on amid surroundings which are quite unsuggestive of opulence. The ground landlords of London are among the richest men in the world, yet scores of people pass their counting-houses without so much as noticing the buildings. But there is no need for display on the part of the men who own the best part of the richest city in the world, says London Tit-Bits.

It is a rather forbidding-looking house in Davies Street, off Oxford Street, wherein is carried on the business of the great Grosvenor estates. Iron railings run round the front of the house, and on one of the two doors a brass plate bears the name of the agents. WHY RAISE HOGS?

There are a number of reasons why it does actually pay to raise hogs. He multiplies rapidly and matures quickly. The pig requires little feed to produce a pound of meat and the market hog is worth good money, cured or fresh. The hog does not require herding and can build up 80 per cent. of his market weight on grass and forage coops.

He is naturally a healthy animal and his only business is to reproduce and turn feed into meat.

There is no need to worry over the dual-purpose hog. You don't have to consider if it is best to raise him for meat or for milk, neither do you have to worry over the question whether it is meat or eggs, or meat and bristles. The hog is raised for meat alone, and when you are driving one crop to market another one ought to be well on its way to marketable condition and weight.

"Next Sunday," he said, "I will preach from the choir loft."

There was a stir in the church, and the more understanding ladies flushed.

tricts in England where a man might own 1,000 acres and yet be in comparative poverty, yet the 120 acres in London yield an income that many a potentate would envy. Apart from numerous streets and squares in Bloomsbury, a district which is growing daily in value, the Bedford family are the proprietors of Covent Garden Market, a monopoly yielding an enormous revenue. Yet there is no outward show about the Bedford estate offices. There is nothing suggestive of untold gold in the little house in Montague Street, by the side of the British Museum, where the estate office is. The strong-room and the Duke's audit-room are features of the building. In front of the houses is a small tree growing in a curious receptacle—to wit, a coffin. It is a very old one, evidently that of a child, and was dug up during some excavations on the estate. The house itself was the first to be built on his Grace's estate, and was built entirely of

HAND-MADE BRICKS.

The Duke of Portland's most famous property is Welbeck Abbey, with its noble surroundings and mysterious underground passages.

But here, again, the Duke is a big London ground landlord, his property of many rich acres lying between Oxford Street and Regent's Park. The Portland estate office is in Queen Anne Street, off Cavendish Square, an uninviting red-brick building, on the front wall of which the passer-by may see the family arms and the famous motto—“Craignez Honte”—Fear disgrace.

The Astor estate office on the Victoria Embankment is a far more pretentious building. Mr W. W. Astor, whose affairs are managed in London, draws many millions from ground in New York City.

The exterior of the building is very characteristic, with its mouldings and gargoyles. The interior is also richly decorated, especially those rooms in which Mr. Astor manages his affairs. It is said that in case of fire the whole building could be flooded in one minute.

WHY RAISE HOGS?

There are a number of reasons why it does actually pay to raise hogs. He multiplies rapidly and matures quickly. The pig requires little feed to produce a pound of meat and the market hog is worth good money, cured or fresh. The hog does not require herding and can build up 80 per cent. of his market weight on grass and forage coops.

He is naturally a healthy animal and his only business is to reproduce and turn feed into meat.

There is no need to worry over the dual-purpose hog. You don't have to consider if it is best to raise him for meat or for milk, neither do you have to worry over the question whether it is meat or eggs, or meat and bristles. The hog is raised for meat alone, and when you are driving one crop to market another one ought to be well on its way to marketable condition and weight.

Heard Her Death Sentence.

To obtain temporary relief when suffering is a great boon, but to be permanently cured and restored to health after being assured that one has not a year to live, is an experience that cannot fail to bring joy to any heart. Yet this is what Mrs. A. E. Ternan, of Norwich, Ont., says PSYCHINE accomplished in her case. She says: "It is ten years since I took PSYCHINE, and I have not taken ten dollars' worth of medicine since. I should not have lived out the year had it not been for PSYCHINE. I am now in excellent health." Can any testimony be stronger than this? If you are feeling worn out and run down try PSYCHINE. The greatest of tonics, PSYCHINE, restores the throat, lungs, heart, stomach, digestive and blood-making organs to perform their proper functions. The only specific known that will cure chronic weakness, catarrh and decline. Sold at all druggists and stores. 50c and $1. Send for a free sample to Dr. T. A. #### WHEAT STRAW BEST BEDDING

Some of the best known and most successful breeders are emphatic in their assertion that wheat straw is the only proper straw to be used as bedding for young pigs. This seems to be a small matter, but success is achieved by paying strict attention to things that are commonly regarded as trifles. Here again we old fellows remember we thought nothing so good as pea straw.

COAL BUCKET FELL ON HIM.

Couldn't Walk for Two Months.

Worker Owes His Restoration to Zam-Buk.

Mr. Daniel Goddard, of Bay Street, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: "While employed superintending the unloading of a coal vessel at Cohen's Coal Dock, a heavy coal bucket in descending into the vessel to be re-filled suddenly overturned, grazing my left leg and scraping the flesh off to the bone. I was compelled to discontinue work and go home for treatment, where I was confined for about two months.

"When able to get out again I got cold in the wound, inflammation started, the wound opened again, and for another month I was unable to move about. I tried all manner of things to get ease and get the wound to heal up, but nothing seemed able to do it. Not only did everything I tried seem useless so far as healing went, but I could get no ease from the aching and the burning pains. At times I was just about crazy with the intense throbbing pains, and night after night got no sleep whatever.

"Not until my wife began applying Zam-Buk did I find relief. When applied to the injured member this balm quickly soothed the pain, and as we continued using it each day brought an improvement. The throbbing pains were soon banished, the inflammation and soreness relieved, and the wound thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous and unhealthy matter.

"Healing then began, and in a wonderfully short time—considering the seriousness of the wound—Zam-Buk effected a complete and lasting cure. I have since had no trouble with the limb at all, and it is as sound and strong as before the injury."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cuts, lacerations, burns, eczema, ring-worm, cold sores, chapped hands, poisoned wounds, festering sores, bad leg, and all skin injuries and diseases. It is also a cure for piles. Pruggins, and stores everywhere sell at 50c a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price. You are warned against harmful imitations sometimes represented as "just as good and cheaper."

"I diagnose all my cases from the patient's eyes," said the doctor, local prices for eggs. The prices then were from 10 cents to 25 cents per dozen, much lower than the prices are in Oregon at the present time. If wheat had been worth, say, 90 cents, and had been charged for at that rate, and bran at 1 cent a pound, the cost per fowl would have been about 16 cents more, or 80 cents instead of 66 cents. But eggs are also higher in price than they were then. On the basis of present prices for eggs, food costing 80 cents when fed to hens would produce eggs worth $2.58. This is a pretty good margin of profit in feeding 90-cent wheat.

It may be said that the average flock of hens does not lay 144 eggs per fowl. That is true. It is also true that 144 eggs per fowl is not phenomenal. The right kind of hens, properly attended, should average 150, and well-bred hens considerably more. The average farm flock will not average 125, probably not 100.

In the above experiments all the food eaten was paid for at market prices, and the cost averaged only 60 cents per hen. The cost would have been only 80 cents if the wheat had cost 20 cents per bushel. The farmer, however, who keeps fifty or a hundred hens can do better than that, for on the average farm that number of hens may be kept largely on the waste products or by-products of the farm. They will find the animal food in the fields, in the shape of bugs, grasshoppers, worms, etc., and there will usually be skim milk or buttermilk. There need, therefore, be no cost for animal food, resulting in a saving of 8 to 10 cents per fowl. The clover or grass they eat will have little marketable value. The destruction of grasshoppers in the clover and grain fields, and of bugs in the orchards, will, where these insects are bad, offset a large part of the animal cost of feed for the fowls in better crops.

In experiments with larger breeds the cost of keeping was greater. The cost of feeding Plymouth Rocks averaged $1.15 per fowl, and at Wyandottes $1. This extra cost is largely offset when the fowls are marketed, the larger breeds bringing more than the small breeds.

Of nervous prostration we hear much now-a-days, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario, are located the curative saline springs known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the springs is "The Welland," where treatments for nervous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician. St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and all particulars apply to J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Union Station, Toronto.

PROFIT IN EGG PRODUCTION.

James S. Dryden, writing in the Oregon Agricultural College Bulletin, relates the results of some interesting experiments made by him, covering several years, in which every ounce of food consumed by six pens of Leghorns was weighed. These six pens of hens consumed during the year 564 pounds wheat, 296 pounds corn, 203 pounds oats, 112 pounds bran and shorts, and 235 pounds skim milk, in addition to some animal food. The cost of the total food per fowl for the year varied in different pens from 61 cents to 78 cents, and averaged 66 cents. The wheat was charged at 1 cent a pound, corn at 1/4¢, oats at a cent, skim milk at a fifth of a cent, and bran and shorts at three-fifths of a cent. The animal food cost from 5 to 6 cents per fowl. The wheat constituted nearly a half of the total cost.

The hens laid an average of 144 eggs per fowl, valued at $1.68 at

FOUR BURNED TO DEATH

Fire From Unknown Cause Destroys House and Its Contents.

A despatch from Brantford says: "Geddes ever recorded in this vicinity was enacted near the village of Lynden on Saturday morning, when the home of Philip Vansickle, a retired prosperous farmer, was destroyed by the devouring element. The disaster was complete, not only dealing destruction to the house, but claiming every one of the four inmates, including the father, son, daughter, and son-in-law. Nothing remains of the once substantial homestead and well-known family but ruined walls and charred bodies."

The Dead.—Philip Vansickle, aged eighty years, retired farmer; Martin Vansickle, aged twenty-three years, his son; Harry Vansickle, aged thirty years, son-in-law; Melitta Vansickle, aged forty years, daughter.

The origin of the fire, which was at first a mystery, has been traced to the stove in the front hall. The supposition is that the glowing coals from it fell on the floor, setting fire to the oil cloth and kindling a blaze, which either suffocated the inmates in their sleep or cut off the means of exit when they endeavored to escape from the building when it became a mass of flames. Thus far, however, all theories are based on supposition.

But one fortunate circumstance stands out against the dark background. Mrs. Harry Vansickle, with her three children, all of whom resided at the destroyed homestead, were absent at the time of the disaster, being at Trinity, where Mrs. Vansickle was visiting her husband's father, Wesley Vansickle. They returned last night terribly affected.

THE GOVERNMENT MAY HELP

Fund to Assist Railways and Municipalities to Do Away With Grade Crossings.

A despatch from Ottawa says: "In connection with the proposed investigation of the Railway Commission into the question of level crossings with a view to evolving a general line of policy to afford greater protection to the public in all parts of Canada, the commission have recommended to the Government the adoption of a system analogous to that in force in some of the States across the border. This system, recognizing that the expense of eliminating all the dangerous level crossings is more than the railways can be expected or made to bear alone, provides for a central Governmental fund to be applied to the gradual improvement of existing conditions. It is suggested by the board that the Provincial and Federal Governments, which chartered the railways should out of the public revenues assist the railways and the municipalities to jointly bear the expense of protecting or eliminating entirely the level crossings. The whole question is now under consideration by the Minister of Railways, but pending the further report of the commission as to the result of the investigation now proposed, it is unlikely that any definite decision will be reached and embodied in legislation."

"Three years from now—the full crop."

"Whew!" Robert shook his head. "That means work," he said, doubtfully.

"Yes, but it means a lot of fun in learning how to value the results of labor. Try it!"

Robert decided to take his father's offer, and as the next day was Saturday, he worked with the men who prepared the strip of land ready for the vines. It was the fall of the year, just the time to begin. He was eager for the next Saturday to come, when he was to begin to set out his vines. These he obtained from his father's land. The vines were set out one foot apart and in squares of one foot. It was hard work, but Robert was not a boy to turn back from a task, and when it was done and the even rows laid out before him

"Yes, but I lose them. I don't know where they go," declared Robert, warming to his subject. "I can't keep a ball, either."

His father reached slowly down into his pocket and drew out his hand empty. "I find that is so with my money," he said, quietly. "I have very hard work to keep my small change. I haven't a nickel this morning."

Robert was silent with surprise.

GANANOQUE'S HEAVY LOSS.

CONI Turner's Block and the Opera House Burned.

A despatch from Gananoque says: At 3.30 on Sunday morning in the store of Jos. McCauley, Turner block, corner of King and Stone streets, flames were discovered coming out of the plate-glass window. The fire spread fast. A heavy north wind was blowing, which sent the sparks over the buildings. The fire department played five streams of water on the building. The fire spread to the Opera House block, owned by W. G. Rogers. It looked at this time as if all of King street would go. The Turner block, owned by W. Y. Boyd, is a three-story brick building, occupied by Clifford Sine, druggist, stock $15,000, insurance $8,000, complete loss; Corrigan & Coy, dry goods, complete loss, insurance not known; Jas. McCauley, restaurant and billiard-room, insured. In the second flat the Tiger hockey team had their club rooms; W. Y. Boyd, insurance office, and Professor Jackson, musical studio. On the third story was the Colonial Theatre. Nothing was saved in the building. Insurance not known. The Grand Opera House, a concrete block building, and one of the most up-to-date opera houses in the Province, was completely destroyed. W. G. Rogers states he has $8,000 insurance on the building. Mr. Rogers' loss will be fully $25,000. Peters Bros. had a restaurant in the building, which is also a total loss. The Workmen and Canadian Order of Foresters had their hall over the stores in this block, and it, too, is a complete loss. The total loss is estimated at $104,000.

THE IMMIGRATION ACT.

Hon. Frank Oliver Proposes Several Amendments.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Some important amendments to the immigration act will be incorporated in a bill respecting immigration, to be introduced in the Commons early this session by the Minister of the Interior. The bill will provide for a consolidation and revision of the present laws, as passed from time to time, thus making the act clearer and more easy of enforcement. It will also provide for a stricter supervision of immigrants on arrival, both as regards medical inspection and to insure that all the regulations of the act are being observed. One of the most important changes now contemplated is the extension of the time limit for deportation from two to three years. At present an immigrant who becomes a public charge within two years of arrival may be deported. It is now proposed to increase the period of probation by one year.

TORONTO'S POPULATION.

According to the Directory Estimate it is 365,923.

A despatch from Toronto says: Toronto has now a population of 365,923, according to the estimate of the Might Directories, Limited, which has just issued its 1909 edition of the city directory. East Toronto and Deer Park, which were annexed to the city on December 15 last, are included in this edition as part of it. The map of the city presented includes not only know where they go," declared Robert, warming to his subject. "I can't keep a ball, either."

His father reached slowly down into his pocket and drew out his hand empty. "I find that is so with my money," he said, quietly. "I have very hard work to keep my small change. I haven't a nickel this morning."

Robert was silent with surprise. No money! "But, father—" he began.

"You will have to learn to keep track of your belongings. I have decided to keep track of my pencils, and I can't throw them away."

Robert knew it was useless to argue, and he turned and ran back to his room. They heard him turning over things and hurriedly searching. He was not a boy to whine.

That evening the subject of the pencils was not resumed, but as Robert sat by the fire, he broke out suddenly, "Father, I wish that marshy land down there by the tennis-court could be filled in. Sometimes we lose our balls over the net, and it's too wet to get them. Couldn't you have the men fill in the place with gravel or something and set it over?"

His father laid down his paper and drew up near Robert's side of the fire. "Gravel or something," he said, "costs money, and the land would not yield anything but grass after that. Do you think it is right to throw away anything so valuable?"

"Throw away?" asked Robert. "Yes, throw away property just as you throw away your pencils and your balls. How would you like to have me show you the fun there is in saying something?"

"I'd like it if it is fun," laughed Robert.

"I think it would be. Now I will give you all that low marshy place to use as you like. You can plant it with cranberry vines—just as the men are doing down on the big bog. You can do the work yourself, except for a little preparing of the land. All I will charge you for that labor is the lead pencils you use between now and the time your money comes in from your crop. Every time I give you money for a pencil, we will set it ian of the year, just the time to begin. He was eager for the next Saturday to come, when he was to begin to set out his vines. These he obtained from his father's land. The vines were set out one foot apart and in squares of one foot. It was hard work, but Robert was not a boy to turn back from a task, and when it was done and the even rows laid out before him he was proud of his work. It was strange how pleasant it was to think about the crop that would come to him, and how easy it was to keep track of his pencils, and how easy it was to go without the taffy or the whistle and buy his own pencils when he had whittled them down to the smallest point.

The next year there were a few cranberries—just a few quarts that he sold to his mother, but which more than paid for any pencils furnished by his father.

He spent some time during the next year keeping the little bog in order, but as he was a whole year older, he did not mind the work.

On the third year the crop in the bog was better than for all previous years, and Robert watched every cranberry, as it were, with jealous eye. When September came and it was time to gather them, the little bog yielded three barrels of ripe red berries! Robert sold these with his father's crop at twelve dollars a barrel, and from the money thus earned he had to subtract but seventy-five cents for lead pencils. He had learned three things—to be careful of his belongings, to work for an object patiently, and to consider his father in the spending of money.—Youth's Companion.

THIEVES BUSY ON TRAINS.

Operations Between Buffalo and Hamilton.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says: The Lehigh Valley and Grand Trunk Railroad detectives have been busy for the past several weeks trying to run down a gang of thieves who have been operating on the passenger trains of these roads between Buffalo and Hamilton. So far, as has been learned by the detectives, or at least from what they are willing to tell, the gang is making its rendezvous in this city. The modus operandi of the gang is to board the train, size up the valises, and then when they are left unguarded when the train nears a station, the thief steps off the train with it and checks it at the station. He may or may not reboard the train, and perhaps make a second haul while making the same trip. The detectives say that the two companies have received a number of complaints recently, but the gang has so cleverly carried on its operations that the detection has thus far been impossible.

HEALTH

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE.

This disease, called also epidemic or epizootic stomatitis, or sore mouth, is primarily a disease of cattle and sheep, but it may attack man as well, and in almost every epidemic some of the human attendants of the cattle or drinkers of the milk suffer. The disease is extremely contagious, and often appears in localities where no previous case has been known, in accordance with the paradoxical law that the more contagious a disease is, the less is the need of actual contact in its spread, and the more mysterious often is its diffusion.

In the case of foot-and-mouth disease, for example, the fluid from the sores in the mouth contains the poison in very concentrated form. This fluid drips from the mouth of the cow or the sheep on to the grass, and is taken into the mouth of another animal grazing later on the same spot. But more than this; a bird may alight at the spot wet with the infectious saliva, or a rabbit or dog may brush some of it off in its fur as it runs over the place, and so may carry it to the next field, or even in the case of a bird,—a pigeon, for example,—to some field many miles distant.

The first symptoms in cattle are a slight trembling or chill, dullness, loss of appetite and stiffness. Soon the animal refuses to graze, evidently because of the soreness of the mouth, as well as by reason of the loss of appetite from the fever. The saliva drips from the mouth, and inspection shows the presence of innumerable little blisters, which soon break, leaving shallow ulcers.

At the same time there is a similar eruption on the feet, just above the horny hoof behind, and on the skin between the two halves of the hoof in front. These are also painful and the animal walks lame, and when standing continually shifts its feet.

The disease lasts about a week. Then the eruption ceases, the ulcers heal, appetite returns, and the animal is driven by hunger to make cautious attempts to eat a little.

Improvement continues, and in young animals complete recovery obtains in a week or two; but in older animals convalescence is more protracted.

The disease may be transmitted to the human being by direct contact, but more often through the milk of a diseased animal, or through butter made from the cream of this milk. The disease in man runs about the same course as in animals. Recovery is the rule, but the attack may vary greatly in severity.—Youth's Companion.

NEW HOUSE OF COMMONS

Various Denominations Are Represented About the Same as Last Parliament

A despatch from Ottawa says: An analysis of the personnel of the new House of Commons with respect to places of birth and religions gives the following interesting figures:—

In the last Parliament there were 200 native-born Canadians; in the new House the native-born number 204. There are six English-born as compared with four in the last House. Ireland sent four sons to the old House, but there are only two native Irishmen in the new House. In each House the membership included three men who were born in the United States. Scotland had three representatives in the last House; now it has only two. The new House also includes one member who was born in South America.

By religions the figures are equally interesting:—The Roman Catholics are of exactly the same as in the old House, the figure in each case being 70. The Presbyterians number 46 in the new House; last year they had 47. The Methodist Church is represented by 50 in the new House, as against 50 in the last Parliament. The Church of England has 41 as against 42. The Baptists numbered eight in the former House; in this they number six. One addition to the religions is a Universalist. The Congregationalists are two, the same as last year, and there is one Lutheran and one Farringdon Independent, just as in the last House.

TRADERS BANK PROSPERITY.

It is very comforting to Canadians to review the history of the past eighteen months and compare the manner in which their country has come through the dangers of the recent panic, with the troublesome times experienced in the United States and other countries older but less fortunate from the banking standpoint. The perfections of the Canadian banking system and the services which it has rendered to the Dominion as a whole and to individual Canadians are not always adequately appreciated by the Canadian people. We are apt to accept as a matter of course such unobtrusive, smoothly working business institutions.

One of the greatest banks in this very excellent system of ours is the Traders Bank. In fact, in point of capital it is our sixth largest banking institution. The reputation of its management for conservative, safe progressiveness has been amply borne out by the business of the 24th fiscal year which was completed on December 31st, 1908.

The Annual Shareholders' Meeting was held in the head office building, Yonge street, Toronto, on January 27th. The statement of the year's operations presented by Mr. Stuart Strathy, the General Manager, shows a position of exceptional strength and very large profits on the year's business. The high esteem in which the Traders Bank is held by the general public is evidenced by the large increase in deposits. This is particularly noteworthy in view of the disturbed financial conditions of the past twelve months.

The net profits of the past year amount to the large total of $300,217.00, after making provision for bad and doubtful debts and reserving accrued interest. The amount, together with the premium of $100 on the issue of new stock, and the balance, $25,364.39, at credit of profit and loss account, gives a total of $325,688.99. This was disposed of by the payment of four quarterly dividends at 7% per annum, amounting to $304,699.40, and by writing off $20,000 from bank premises and furniture for depreciation and transferring to

The address of the President, Mr. C. D. Warren, as well as that of the General Manager, Mr. Stuart Strathy, reflected an optimism that is most encouraging and a caution that is admirable to the last degree. The shareholders and depositors of the Traders Bank are indeed fortunate in having as president of their institution a man of the business experience and great ability of Mr. Warren.

With the commencement of the Western Elevator Company's building in West Fort William and the work already going on on the Grand Trunk Pacific elevator this makes three large elevators which will be erected in the two cities during this year.

By numerous tests by the best Bakers the above mentioned grades have been proven to be the best Flours in the market.

When buying Flour ask for Dafoe's, and patronize your home mill, thereby producing Bran and Shorts that you can purchase cheaper than the product of the Western mills, which has to be transported thousands of miles at great expense, and usually, when it reaches you, of inferior quality.

The grocer complains if the farmer or the mechanic sends to Toronto or to outside points for an article he can get at the home store just as good, but he does not hesitate to buy Flour from mills hundreds of miles away, and sell you an inferior Flour for more money than you can purchase the home product for, every bag of which is guaranteed.

BOYLE & SON:

Early on Tuesday morning, fire was discovered in the house of James Irvin, in the east end of Sharbot Lake village, and before anything could be saved the building was consumed. Mr. Irvin, alone in the house, escaped in his night clothes. The fire broke out in the roof and likely from a defective chimney. The villagers turned out promptly but could do little service. The building, frame, was valued at $1,500. Mr. Irvin had a partial insurance. He is a drover. His family was absent.

Alexander Richardson, a wealthy and highly respected farmer of Leeds, died very suddenly Saturday morning. He had been out in the morning as usual attending to his stock and doing his work around the barn, after which he went into the house and lay down upon couch to rest. Mrs. Richardson went upstairs to attend to her household duties and came down when she had finished, to be horrified with the sight of her husband lying on the couch a lifeless corpse. Deceased was 65 years of age and was a life resident of the locality. He was a member of Bethel Methodist Church at Wilstead. Besides his wife, who was Miss Bruton, he leaves two sons, Frederick, who is married and lives on a farm adjoining his father's, Roy at home, and one daughter, Mrs. James Kyes residing in Lansdowne township, a short distance from the homestead.

Canada has a fleet of eight armed cruisers which patrol the boundary

by foreign fishing vessels. The story of how and why the Dominion pro-extensive in the world, is told in a breezy manner in the February number many other bright features in this month's unusually attractive edition, including an able and comprehensive contribution on "The Finances of the ### Grand Success.

The entertainment given by St. John's church, Selby, on Wednesday evening was a grand success. The town hall was taxed to the utmost, even after chairs were brought to fill the aisles many had to stand. The evening was all that could be asked for, with full moon and good sleighing. The Rev. Dr. Purdy called upon Mr. Robt. E. Paul to act as chairman of the evening, and later, when the Rev. Mr. Dowdell, now rector of Sydenham, but lately of Selby, for a few words during intermission. All the numbers were well rendered. The panoramic flag drill, by the sixteen young ladies, being particularly picturesque, and some of the visitors at the "R. R. Ticket Office," very interesting. Miss Marguerite Hall gave the recitation by which she won the Royal Templars gold medal recently. Mr. Dudley Hill found many admirers and was as funny as usual. The help rendered by the Misses Hall, and Messrs. Choneweth, Fitzgerald and McClemon, was but lately of Selby, for a few words during intermission. All the numbers were well rendered. ### Opera House To-Night.

"Garbed in her $1000 cloth-of-gold directoire, Kathryn Osterman is a vision of billowy delight" is the way Winnifred Black describes the appearance of the brilliant comedienne in her new comedy offering "The Night of the play." Feminine interest goes out strongly to Miss Osterman's gowns. They are all elaborate. As for the play, the old saying "It is to laugh" must again be brought into use. All have to laugh, and it is only a question of how long and often one is compelled to laugh, for when the laughter-loving Kathryn throws back her head, tilts her chin to an elevation of 45 degrees, and the ripples of her mirth bubble forth and grow and swell into waves and billows of merriment, there is no use to resist. The bacillus of joy is in the air and one can escape it no more than one can escape during an influenza epidemic. Laughter is the keynote of the Osterman entertainment. It breaks out at the most unexpected times and places until sometimes there comes a vague wonder whether or not the clever star and her able assistants are going to overdo it and spoil the fun by too much of it. But fortunately it is said, they do not. Kathryn Osterman in "The Night of the Play" is universally declared a delight.

Fire at Gananoque.

At 3:30 Sunday morning in the store of Jos. McCauley, Turner block, corner of King and Stone streets, Gananoque, flames were discovered coming out of the plate glass windows. The fire spread fast. A heavy north wind was blowing, which sent the sparks over the buildings. The fire department played five streams of water on the building. The fire spread to the Opera House block, owned by W. G. Rogers. It looked at this time as if all King street would go. The Council called up Mayor Cooper of Kingston and asked for fire engine and firemen to assist. Within forty minutes Mayor Cooper had the engine loaded at Kingston Junction. It was then found that the firemen had the fire under control, and Mayor Cooper was notified. The Turner block, owned by W. Y. Boyd, is a three-story brick building, occupied by Clifford Sire, druggist, stock $15,000, insurance $8,000, complete loss; Corrigan Coy, dry goods, complete loss, insurance not known; Jas. McCauley, restaurant and billiard room, insured. In the second flat the Tiger hockey team had their club rooms; W. Y. Boyd, insurance office, and Professor Jackson, musical studio. On the third floor was the Colonial Theatre. Nothing was saved in the building. Insurance not known. The Grand Opera House, a concrete block building, and one of the most up-to-date opera houses in the Province, was completely destroyed. W. G. Rogers states he has $8,000 insurance on the building. The building was not a year old, and cost $30,000. Mr. Rogers' loss will be fully $25,000. He had a meat store in the building, which is a total loss. Peter Bea, had a restaurant in the building, which is also a total loss. The Workmen and Canadian Order of Foresters had their hall over the stores in this block, and it, too, is a complete loss. The total loss is estimated at $104,000.

EFFECTIVE RECIPE.

Here is a simple home-made mixture as given by an eminent authority on Kidney diseases, who makes the statement that it will relieve almost any case of Kidney trouble if taken before the stage of Bright's disease. He states that such symptoms as lame back, pain in the side, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night; painful and discolored urination, are readily overcome. Here is the recipe. Try it:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Karrow one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

These ingredients are all harmless and easily mixed at home by shaking well in a bottle. This mixture has a peculiar healing and soothing effect upon the entire Kidney and Urinary structure, and often overcomes the worst forms of Rheumatism in just a little while. This mixture is said to remove all blood disorders and cure Rheumatism by forcing the Kidneys to filter and strain from the blood and system all uric acid and foul, decomposed waste matter, which cause these afflictions. Try it if you aren't well. Save the prescription.

The programme was a large and choice one and thoroughly enjoyed by the many present. Each contestant gave her recitation in fine style and after careful consideration, the judges awarded the medal to Miss M. Hall, who recited "Poorhouse Nan." The judges were Mr. J. M. Denyes, Newburgh, Dr. C. E. Wilson and Rev. J. R. Conn, Napanee. Rev. G. W. McCaul presented the medal.

STELLA.

Things have been lively in this "Island City" recently. There were, to begin with, the Christmas festivals by all the churches; then dances and suppers by the Orange lodges; ice boating and hockey on the bay; and social parties every now and then. Among the latest events worthy of notice, may be mentioned, a fine concert given by the young people of the Presbyterian church and their friends the first of a series of "At Homes" to be held during the winter by the Farmers' Institute. It was held in the town hall and largely attended. Rev. Dr. Porter gave the address of the evening, and songs and recitations were contributed by Miss Mackenzie, Dr. Caran, Mr. Cook and others. The next meeting is to be February 6th.

On the 27th ult., Mr. and Mrs. Glen celebrated their golden wedding, and were the recipients of an address, a complimentary banquet and many presents.

The great event of the week was the dramatic entertainment held by the Stella Literary and Dramatic Society, under the auspices of the Methodist church. The play was "The Corner Store," given by nine performers, in four acts, with appropriate scenery and costumes. It was admirably staged and acted, and being full of rich humor and pure Christian sentiment, and free from vulgarity, gave unqualified satisfaction to the largest audience seen in Stella for years. Proceeds exceeded $50.

Dr. Girvin returns to the west in a few days, to the very great regret of the Stella people. During his all-to-brief visit, he has thrown himself headlong into all our church and social life, and rendered invaluable aid.

DENBIGH.

Mr. George Peter Rodgers, a victim of consumption, who had been ill a long time and not able to work any more for about a year, died on January 27th at the residence of his widowed mother, Mrs. A. McGowan, at the age of 31 years. The funeral was held on Jan. 29th at the Methodist church and cemetery, and was attended by a very large number of sympathizing friends.

On January 29th, Mr. Wm. C. Plotz, peacefully and quite unexpectedly passed away, after a very eventful life, at the residence of his adopted son, Mr. Philip Plotz. His death was due to heart failure. He reached the ripe old age of nearly 83 years. Owing to a severe fall he had some time ago he was of late not so robust as usual, but not actually sick. A few hours before his death he complained of not feeling well and said he would lay down and rest a little. In the evening Mr. Philip went to ask him if he would join the family at the supper

The "Toronto Daily Star" is strong in special features for Women.

There are the daily Home Pages—the daily instalment of a good story—the Social and Personal columns—the illustrated daily Fashion Hints.

But the "Star's" strongest appeal to the wide-awake woman is the unusually interesting way in which it presents the news of all the world, day by day.

There is not a dry line in it—yet it is not sensational or in any way "yellow." Just good, clean, wholesome, well-written accounts of everything that is going on that's worth reading about.

John Hughes intends starting his

Quite a number have left our town during the last few months.

Mr. Fitchett one of our oldest and most respected citizen's has moved his family to Point Ann where he has secured a situation.

Mr. Fitchett came to this place several years ago, his occupation being that of general blacksmith, which position he ably filled. His winning ways have won to himself a host of friends in this place who are sorry to part with him. Owing to bad health he was compelled to give up his blacksmithing and take up other employment. The young people of Marlbank were very sorry to part with their daughter, Miss Clara, she being loved, honored and respected by all who knew her for her sterling piety and strict integrity. A farewell party was given at her home on Saturday evening and a large number of young people gathered to bid her farewell, and also to show their great respect by way of presents and otherwise.

On Monday evening Mrs. Dr. Burrows presented her with a valuable present. Mr. W. J. Wilson, who is always ready to fall in line, also gave her a nice present before leaving.

A GIRL'S INFLUENCE.

A girl can always greatly influence a young man, either for good or evil. I never fully realized the truth of this until a short time ago. An interesting experience of my own has shown me what the girls could do if they would

I was visiting friends in another city, and was invited out one evening to party.

At the gathering I met a young man in whom I was at once deeply interested. He looked very delicate, his voice was husky, and every now and then he coughed.

We began to converse and, after a few questions from me, he told me that he was only 18, but that he had smoked cigarettes for four years. He added that they had ruined his voice. He said that the girls of the crowd had never objected when the boys wished to smoke, and that some of the mothers would even ask the boys to the smoking room.

Here was a boy who seemed to have had good home training, but who had started to smoke at an early age, and who had unfortunately been thrown with a crowd that encouraged him in what was wrong. Here was a case where girls had permitted them selves to exert a bad influence.

We discussed the cigarette question for some time. He finally confided to me that he wished he could "break off." Then he hesitated and said: "I wish some nice girl in the crowd, one whom I liked would only take a stand against smoking, and help me to stop. I really need encouragement."

These few earnest words, spoken by a cigarette-loving boy, certainly show what influence the girls could have. This boy had been in the midst of a smoking crowd for four years, and yet a few of the right kind of words had made him wish to "break off."

We continued to talk, and he finally told me that he would stop the next day, and would not smoke for a year. I encouraged him all I could. Of course, he may not be strong enough to keep his promise, as the old influence may sweep his good resolution away, but, be that as it may, I feel very well repaid for my efforts, and shall continue to try to exert the best influence I can.

Oh! that all the girls in our country would form a mighty brigade and help banish the deadly cigarette from our glorious land!

ODESSA.

Several from here attended the twenty-fifth anniversary wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rose, at Bath, on Saturday night, Jan. 23rd.

About twenty young people from Kingston drove to Lieut-Col. Clyde's, Odessa, on Thursday night and spent the evening with his daughter, Miss Flossie, who has been attending the Kingston Business College, and, we are pleased to say, has successfully passed her examination.

The woman's missionary society met at Mrs. P. A. Mabee's on Thursday afternoon last. Light refreshments were served and the amount realized was nearly $4.

The funeral service of the late W.
S. Hegadorn was held at the Free Methodist church on Saturday afternoon, by the Rev. Charles Goodrich.

The Odessa Citizens' band gave an enjoyable concert in the town hall on Saturday night and realized a neat little sum for their treasury.

Harry Lee had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse through sickness.

The ice harvesting is on now and several are laying in a good supply while it is in first class condition.
